Farley Gives Six-Point Plan to Keep U. S. at Peace

Talks on Issues For First Time; Roosevelt Bid To Wheeler Seen

Postmaster General James A. Farley last night opened his discussion of issues in his campaign for the Presidency by approving the foreign policies pursued by President Roosevelt and Secretary of State Hull.

A six-point program for keeping the country at peace, advocated in a speech Farley delivered at Boston, included defense preparedness, exclusion of all aggression from this hemisphere assistance to other American nations, "noninvolvement without surrender of American rights" and steady laboring for mutually beneficial commercial relations.

The speech, the text of which was made public here by the Democratic National Committee, was broadcast nationally. The occasion was a reception and dinner given in Farley's honor by the Democratic State Committee of Massachusetts.

Farley told newsmen that his address constituted the first public expression of his personal views on current issues as a candidate, the Associated Press reported.

Farley spoke after Senator David I. Walsh (Democrat), of Massachusetts, had given him "unmistakable assurance" of support by Massachusetts. Three former Massachusetts Democratic Governors, James M. Curley, Charles F. Hurley and Joseph B. Ely, the latter an outspoken foe of the New Deal, also pledged their allegiance to Farley and urged restoration of party harmony in the Bay State.

Wheeler Bid

The speech attracted immediate attention in Washington political circles, already speculating on the political significance of reports that President Roosevelt soon will confer at the White House with Senator Burton K. Wheeler, of Montana, a possible Democratic Presidential candidate.

At the same time, District Attorney Thomas E. Dewey, of New York, candidate for the Republican nomination, despite an apparent rebuke for his foreign relations stand in President Roosevelt's Saturday night address, declared that this country should refrain "from intervening in the affairs of the rest of the world."

Friends Encouraged

Senator Wheeler, who broke with the President over the court reorganization plan in 1937, said last night that he had been out of town for several days and had not received any invitation to the White House, which presumably would call for his appearance after the President returns from his present vacation at Warm Springs, Ga. Friends who have advanced Wheeler as a "liberal" who could weld the contending Democratic factions were greatly encouraged by reports that such a conference was contemplated by the President.

Apparently friendlier relations between Mr. Roosevelt and the Montanan since the end of the court fight were climaxed last night when Wheeler spoke in a radio debate in defense of the Administration's relief policies. Wheeler has said that Mr. Roosevelt could be renominated and reelected

Scalise Arrested On Dewey's Order

ANN KIMMLER

GEORGE SCALISE

By the Associated Press

New York, April 21.—George Scalise, international president of the 70,000 members of the Building Service Employes International Union (A. F. of L.), was arrested in his room at the Commodore Hotel at 3 a. m. today on charges of extorting about $100,000 in the last three years from 20 local hotels and cleaning contractors.

He was accused by aides of District Attorney Dewey, a Republican Presidential aspirant, of getting money by threatening strikes or excessive wage increase demands, or by threatening to unionize nonunion establishments.

After spending the day in the Tombs, Scalise was released in $40,000 bail posted by the union through a bonding company.

Scalise's police record showed that he served 4½ year in the Atlanta Federal Penitentiary on a 1913 conviction for white slavery.

Assistant District Attorney Murray Gurfein said two other union

Votes Free, WPA Tells 2,100,000

Harrington Notifies Workers They Need Not Fear Reprisals; Supervisors Warned

Relief Discussed

Senator Wheeler defends WPA as "American way," while Senator Bridges urges local control to take politics out of relief in Nation-wide broadcast. Page 2.

Ballots Free

The Nation's 2,100,000 WPA enrollees were notified yesterday by Commissioner F. C. Harrington that they were free to vote as they choose without fear of reprisals, or to refrain from voting if they wished.

"Voting is your own business. Keep it so," Col. Harrington said in letters ordered posted on all WPA bulletin boards and distributed with every pay roll check.

Apparently determined that the coming campaign would see no repetition of the political activity charged to WPA supervisory employes in the 1938 campaign, before he was appointed commissioner, Col. Harrington wrote:

"WPA is not in politics and does not take part in politics, either directly or indirectly."

Law Forbids Asking Funds

"No one either connected with or not connected with the WPA can get you fired or change your wages," he added, "because you do or do not vote or because you belong to or do not belong to a political party. It is against the law for anyone to ask you for money for any political campaign."

He cautioned all those in administrative or supervisory capacities that it is now against the law for them "to engage in political activity or to take an active part or use their influence directly or indirectly in political management or political campaigns or political conventions."

Firmly he warned those under him that "I will not tolerate any violation of the above regulations."

Urges Halting Projects

At the same time Harrington wrote to all State administrators that in order to grant all WPA workers opportunity to vote "it may be desirable to suspend project operations entirely on voting days," and that the employes should be enabled to "exercise their voting privileges without the loss of pay."

The letters were issued as steps were being taken on Capitol Hill seeking to block the necessity for dropping from 350,000 to 600,000 WPA enrollees to keep within the WPA appropriation for the current fiscal year.

Senator Pepper (Democrat), of Florida, leader of a group of a dozen Senators with that objective, told the Associated Press he would introduce today a resolution to nullify the so-called Woodrum amendment which requires WPA to make its appropriation last over the whole fiscal year ending June 30.

Pepper explained that it was designed to permit the WPA to keep on its rolls—as long as its current appropriation lasts—all of the relief clients drawing pay April 1. He said that about 200,000 have been cut off since that date and that

11 Killed When Autos Hit Head-on

Youth Hurled 60 Ft.; 4 Schoolboys, Girls Among the Dead; Police Blame Speed

Slayton, Minn., April 21 (AP). A head-on collision of two automobiles so terrific gears flew out of their steel cases, took the lives of 11 young persons near here early today. Seven died instantly. Two others were injured, one probably fatally.

So violent was the collision that one of the bodies was hurled 60 feet from the wreckage. Others were strewn on the highway nearby. Several were crushed in the tangled wreckage.

Transmission and differential gears were scattered on the highway and a generator armature popped from its heavy encasement.

Seven persons were riding in one machine and six in the other. But one person, Elmer Meyer, 18, of Jackson, will probably escape the crash alive, hospital attaches said.

Capt. Ralph Potzin of the State highway patrol said excessive speed undoubtedly contributed to the heavy death toll, the greatest in Minnesota traffic history.

Two Girls Among Dead

The dead:

Wayne Gamble, 17, Hadley; Everett Johnson, 17, Slayton; Irene Schwab, 17, Fulda; Harold and Lorens Tuynman, brothers, 18 and 19, respectively, near Slayton; Rachel Fisher, 17, Fulda.

In the other machine; George Larson, 20; Carl A. Falk, 21; Gordon Meyers, 23; Leo Egge, 18; Hollis Luft, 21, all of Jackson.

Near death in a Slayton hospital with five crushed vertebrae and other injuries is Cecil Jensen, 17, Jackson, passenger with Larson. Meyer, also riding in the Larson car, suffered a broken arm and severe shock.

Four High School Students

Gamble, Johnson, Miss Schwab and Miss Fisher were high school students.

The noise of the collision attracted Dr. Henry Domes, living two blocks away.

Several were dead when the doctor arrived, others were bleeding and near death. Dr. Domes found four bodies beside the smashed machines, and others inside.

Falk, Miss Fisher and Harold Tuynman succumbed in a Slayton hospital.

Most of the victims were jammed forward in the cars. Some bodies had to be pried from the wreckage.

One Remains Upright

Sheriff George Nelson, of Murray County, said Lorens Tuynman was believed to have been the driver of the Slayton machine. The other car was driven either by Larson or Myers. Neither left the highway. The Jackson machine overturned but the Slayton car remained upright.

Hollis Luft, the sheriff said, was thrown 60 feet from the wreckage to a pasture.

Hamar and Elverum Reported Recaptured; Allies Caution Italy

Paris and London Notify Rome They Won't Tolerate Yugoslav Invasion

By Ralph Heinzen
United Press Staff Writer

Paris, April 21.—France and Britain have informed Italy they will not tolerate the slightest change in the Mediterranean status quo, including the Adriatic, and that they could not continue to recognize her as a nonbelligerent if the Fascist state occupied any part of Yugoslavia, even in the guise of "preventative" or "protective" occupation, a Foreign Office informant said tonight.

(Ronald Cross, British Minister of Economic Warfare, in a speech last week, demanded that Italy make her position known and said that if Italy "wanted to be treated as a neutral she must act like one.")

Axis Ties Reemphasized

Premier Reynaud told the French Senate yesterday that France has never received the slightest encouragement from Italy to feelers in Rome looking toward an amicable agreement to settle the age-old "Mediterranean problem." He said such advances had been made by France since the war began in Europe as well as before.

In recent months the Italian government has reiterated frequently the continuation of the Rome-Berlin axis and only last week announced the exchange of German and Italian military missions in all branches of the armed forces in order to keep the two military machines in close touch.

The Italian press recently has been furiously hostile toward the Allies, especially Britain, and public speeches of Italian leaders have warned the Italian people to be ready to fight and have hinted that Italy may enter the war soon.

Declare For Status Quo

The Allies believe Italy is under intense pressure from Germany to enter the war. The only field they see where such action could be effective is the Balkans and narrowing down to the Balkans, Paris sees only western Yugoslavia and specifically the Dalmatian east coast of the Adriatic Sea, which Italy regards as her own, as a setting for possible Italian action.

Therefore both Premier Reynaud and British Prime Minister Chamberlain have in the past week made it clear that they favor a Balkan status quo and are opposed to extension of the war to southeastern Europe.

(In London a spokesman said last week the British Mediterranean fleet was ready to meet any eventualities, after Italian fleet movements, ostensibly in connection with spring maneuvers, were reported.)

Nazi Envoy Called Home

Rome, April 21 (AP).—The German Ambassador, Hans-Georg Viktor Von MacKensen, has gone to Berlin, it was learned today, and diplomatic circles believe he was summoned to confer with Adolf Hitler.

The ambassador left Rome two days ago, but his absence became known only when he failed to appear at the German colony's celebration of Hitler's fifty-first birthday yesterday.

Allied Tanks Active

By Thomas F. Hawkins.
Associated Press Staff Writer

Stockholm (Monday), April 22.—A fast-swinging British-French expeditionary force, hammering with a battering ram of tanks, was reported battling the Germans in Norway today from north of Trondheim on the west coast almost to the Swedish border north of Oslo.

Norwegian Legation officials corroborated reports that the British, supported by tanks, had aided the Norwegians in recapturing Hamar, 60 miles north of Oslo and 40 miles from the Swedish border, and said it was reported Elverum, nearby, had been retaken, too.

Other sources, describing a battle which began at 5 a. m. Sunday with heavy firing, said it had set aflame the town of Verdalsora, 35 miles north of Trondheim on the west coast.

French Land Division

A French division was reported landed at Namsos, 100 miles north of Trondheim, and it was assumed the fighting was an effort of the British-French-Norwegians to push the Germans out of their positions astride the Trondheim-Namsos railway at Levanger, 5 miles south of Verdalsora.

The Germans presumably were intent upon grasping Verdalsora, important because it is on the railroad and also controls a good highway to the Swedish frontier.

The English at Hamar were rushed overland by railroad to take part in stemming the German expansion in the Oslo district. They were reported by legation officials to have come from Andalsnes, 100 miles south of Trondheim.

The "Oslo" front, it was said, runs from northwest of Honefoss, 25 miles northwest of the capital, to Gjovik, Hamar and Elverum and thence in a straight line east to the Swedish border.

Extends to Lillehammer

A salient driven into this line between Gjovik and Hamar, it was explained, runs all the way up to Lillehammer, 80 miles north of Oslo and 25 miles beyond Hamar.

(Reinforced German troops in the Oslo region were making progress "in all directions," the German communique said yesterday, with one fighting group pushing northward about 32 miles past Hamar and a few miles beyond Lillehammer, and others near Gjo-

Dutch Blame Indies Issue On British

Agitation Over Japan Is Called Attempt To Get U. S. Into War

By Frazier Hunt
International News Service Staff Writer

Amsterdam, April 21. — A high government official tonight completely punctured for me the bubble of possible Japanese intervention in the Dutch East Indies.

"We are victims of our own busybody friends," he told me. "England would like nothing better than to drag America into war through the back door.

"If the Allies are able to involve America in the Far East against Japan it would remove from the Allies the responsibility for checking Japan in China and fighting her in the event she should decide to join up with Germany.

"Feeding America the idea that Japan is planning an invasion of the Dutch East Indies fans bitterness which might break out into flames.

With astonishing candor this important official also restated the Netherlands' determination to run her own affairs.

"Even if we are invaded by Germany," he said, "and Britain and France were to become our Allies, we would not permit them to have anything to do with our islands.

"We would help them fight Germany, but we always make our own decisions on where and how. We would not permit the British to in-

Hundreds Go Back to Homes As Ohio Ebbs

Waters Taper Off From Pittsburgh To Cincinnati

By The Associated Press

Marietta, Ohio, April 21.—Muddy flood waters rolled slowly down the winding Ohio River today, their rise tapering off gradually along the 500-mile Pittsburgh-to-Cincinnati stretch.

The "flattening out" relieved the anxiety of several thousand homeless and started an exodus back to vacated dwellings. River-wise city officials, noting reports of recession at Pittsburgh despite heavy rains over the upper Allegheny watershed last night, expressed belief the inundation would prove more annoying than damaging. Generally fair and sunny weather was reported today throughout the Ohio Valley.

Southeastern Ohio appeared hardest hit, the uncertain stream and its tributaries converting nearly a third of the State's rural area into a maze of lakes. Several towns were isolated for a short time.

Marietta merchants moved out their stocks as the water rose to 2 feet in the business district and drove 75 persons from their homes.

Stoplight Bandit Kidnaps Girl

Miss Edith Krieger, 25, of 1125 Twelfth street northwest, reported to police last night she was kidnaped by a stoplight bandit who forced her to drive to McLean, Va., where she was forced from her automobile. She said the man entered her car at Tenth and Pennsylvania avenue northwest.

Miss Krieger said the bandit, who was armed, said he had escaped from a penitentiary at Frederick, Md., and was going to "get the guy that sent me up" at Fairfax, Va.

Fight Injures 2 Policemen At Tidal Basin

Motorist Is Taken To Hospital, Brother Held After Fracas

Two park policemen and a prisoner were under care of physicians last night after a melee in front of the John Paul Jones statue at Seventeenth street northwest and the Tidal Basin.

Scores of pedestrians and motorists, paying homage to what was left of the Japanese cherry blossoms, witnessed the fight which ended with the arrest of two brothers, hospitalization for one, and injuries to the policemen.

The fight began when, according to Park Police Lieut. H. Helms, Robert B. Wells, 25, of 2621 Third street northeast, refused to leave his auto and submit to arrest following an argument with Privates Reynolds I. Bartmess, 33, and Sydney B. Collins, 31.

The police said that Wells expressed his refusal in terms of flying fists and kicking feet, so that both patrolmen required medical treatment. Wells was charged with assault on an officer and with being disorderly and drunk, and then taken to Gallinger Hospital.

Both police were hurt so badly, according to Lieut. Helm, they were relieved of duty. Bartmess, who lives at 3801 Halley Terrace southeast, complained of being kicked in the abdomen and it was feared he might be suffering internal injuries. Collins, who lives at 4406 Illinois avenue northwest, suffered cuts and bruises to the head.

A brother of Wells, Ralph, 30, of 709 Jackson street northeast, was also arrested and charged with being drunk and disorderly. He was released on $200 bond.

The argument began after Bartmess had called the auto containing the Wells brothers and four others to a stop.

Mystery Tip Checked

Woman Plunges 70 Feet Off Calvert St. Bridge, Lives

Mrs. Margaret Frere, 29, of 1124 Tenth street northeast, was found lying unconscious on the rainsoaked sod 70 feet below Calvert street bridge yesterday morning after a phone call from an unidentified man brought a scout car from the Eighth Precinct to the scene.

Police last night were investigating the theory that Mrs. Frere might have been pushed from the span. She was unconscious, in Emergency Hospital, suffering from fractured ribs and legs, concussion of the brain and possible fracture of the skull.

Her husband, James, a supervisor at the plant department of the Chesapeake & Potomac Telephone Co., said yesterday Mrs. Frere had been under the care of a physician for high blood pressure and nervous disorders for the past 10 days.

It was Mrs. Frere's habit, the husband said, to take early morning cab rides whenever she felt restless and this is apparently what she did before dawn yesterday.

After a Saturday night card party which lasted till 1 a. m., the couple retired, Frere said. The wife, unable to sleep, rose and dressed, saying she was going out for a ride.

"I'll be back shortly," Frere recalled her saying as she kissed him good-by at the door about 4:30 a. m. yesterday.

At 6:30, police received the phone call from an unidentified man and five minutes later Private R. M. Kirby and S. C. Belt found Mrs. Frere under the bridge, 50 feet west of Cathedral avenue. She was taken to the hospital in an ambulance.

Gifted Kiowas Returning

Indian 'Nijinskys' Will Oper Folk Festival on Thursday

It's hard to beat an Indian when it comes to putting on a show full of color and rhythm. More specifically, it's hard to beat the Kiowa dancers.

This Oklahoma tribe has appeared at the National Folk Festival for six successive years, so festival leaders know what they're talking about when they say:

"Of course the Kiowas are coming back his year. We couldn't put on a folk festival without the Kiowas."

Wearing their embroidered buckskins and richly feathered headdresses, the Kiowa braves will open the seventh annual National Folk Festival at Constitution Hall Thursday. Their dances will be featured on both matinee and evening performances Thursday, Friday and Saturday.

Folklore authorities and other Indian tribes concede the Kiowas to be among the greatest redskin dancers in America. "Bronze-skinned Nijinskys" is the term applied to them by one eloquent admirers.

It was not ever thus. About 12 years ago Prof. O. B. Jacobson, of the University of Oklahoma, questioned some young Indians among his art students as to the authenticity of an Indian dance they were sketching. They said they themselves were unfamiliar with the subject, but that the old men of the tribe still remembered the steps they used in the days when a Kiowa war dance meant trouble ahead for white men.

Jacobson encouraged the young artists to revive the ceremonials. Through his interest, these picturesque dances were thus saved from extinction. The youths learned them, practiced them and became as proficient as their scalp-collecting ancestors.

Stephen Mopope and James Auchiah, two young artists, have become known as the Kiowas' star dancers. They also have brought their painting to a high plane of decorative art, and recently completed a mural in the new Interior Building here. Both will appear at the National Folk Festival.

The Kiowas' festival program includes the Shield Dance, Turkey Dance, Fast and Slow War Dances, Owl Dance, Buffalo Dance and Snake Dance.

17 From U. S. Legation Arrive In Sweden From Norse Ruins

By the Associated Press

Stockholm, April 21.—Seventeen members of the families of the United States Legation in Norway arrived at the Swedish border town of Fjallnes today, fatigued by their 120-mile journey from bombed and machine-gunned Lillehammer and the hardships they had endured.

The leader of the party was the American military attache, Lieut. Col. Ole Hagen.

In the party were eight children, the smallest Ann Ronhovde, 15-month-old daughter of the Norwegian professor, A. G. Ronhovde, of Rutgers University. The professor accompanied his wife and 3-year-old son.

The children, two of whom were sick when they left Oslo before the Germans occupied the city, seemed to have withstood the hardships well.

The party also included Mrs. Raymond Cox, wife of the legation secretary; Mrs. T. O. Klath, whose husband is commercial attache; Mrs. Austin Preston, wife of the consul general in Oslo; Mrs. Easton Kelsey and Mrs. Brigg Perkins, whose husbands are vice consuls.

They all left Oslo early April 9 after a wakeful night because of air raid alarms, and drove to Lillehammer in a motor caravan with American flags spread over their car roofs.

Lieut. Col. Hagen said a snowstorm forced the party to abandon previous plans to come out of Norway by way of Hamar and Elverum

Over the Coffee

By Harlan Miller

GLAMOUR HELLO: Bigshots who have been introduced to Tom Dewey for the first time have been vastly flattered by his words of greeting, which went, for example, roughly like this: "Senator Hatch, I greet you as a great American!"

Harlan Miller

But eavesdropping grammarians have spoiled this slightly by analyzing Dewey's sentence, in the way grammarians have of pulling a butterfly to pieces.

They ask, "Does the phrase 'as a great American' modify the subject or the object? Which is the great American, Dewey or the person greeted?"

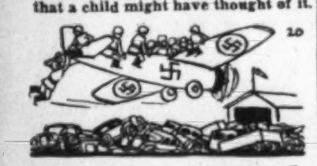
* * * *

ALLIES FOR SALE? Cloakroom gossip in the Senate, being peddled around the Capital by isolationist Senators, is that there will soon be a drive to sell the Allies war planes on credit. Explanation: Though the Allies have some billions of fairly liquid assets in this country to spend, they need it worse to keep the Balkans, Turkey and Italy friendly, or as friendly as possible.

* * * *

MINED AIRPORTS: Neutral countries, fearful of Nazi invasion by air, with huge planes carrying 20 or more fully equipped soldiers, have hit upon a solution.

They have found a way to prevent landings, a method so simple that a child might have thought of it.



"——jalopies on the runways"

They simply cover the airport, runways and all, with taxicabs, old trucks, jalopies almost ready for the junk pile, parked at intervals of 50 yards or so.

The general effect is like an anti-airplane minefield.

An airport can be kept inaccessible for all night, or made inaccessible in a few minutes. Lanes can be left open which can be closed up with 10 cars. Landing at 70 m. p. h. means a crash and death for the invaders.

* * * *

THIRD TERM: Though much of the wise money says the odds are about 51 to 49 against President Roosevelt running for a third term, some of the top New Dealers are now saying that a "draft Roosevelt" tidal wave will sweep over the convention, maybe on the first ballot.

* * * *

"Only one kind of a statement by Roosevelt can prevent the convention from nominating him," said a Cabinet member more or less privately. "And that would be a paraphrase of Gen. Sherman's famous statement:

"If nominated, I will not run; if elected, I will not serve."

* * * *

NAZIS CAN NOMINATE: While this Cabinet member's assertion may be partly wishful thinking, the impression is spreading here that Hitler can assure Roosevelt's nomination by bombing London or invading Holland or Belgium during the next 55 days.

"——Benito's son-in-law insulted?"

INSULT: At the moment the impression prevails here that Hitler and Mussolini are arms-around-the-neck and working in hot cahoots, since their meeting at the Brenner Pass.

But high officials at the State Department have heard that there is bad blood between Benito's son-in-law, Ciano, and Hitler's Ribbentrop.

* * * *

The story has gotten around that Ribbentrop virtually insulted Ciano at their last meeting, or so it seemed to Ciano, who was annoyed almost to duello pitch by the Nazi's arrogant treatment.

* * * *

SCREWY POLLS: Senators are flabbergasted by the assertion of a political leader that he polled the Senate and found that 22 Senators who voted to repeal the arms embargo would now vote the other way.

Several Senators told me that it is likelier that 15 or 20 Senators who voted against the repeal would now vote for it.

* * * *

OVER THERE: Attorney General Jackson's public comment on Senator Bridges' criticism of the dismissal of charges against Detroit reds who recruited soldiers to fight in Spain was mild compared to what he said privately.

He said he didn't care how many blankety-blank Communists or any others went to Europe to fight; what he proposes to stop is fighting on this side, like that plotted by the pro-Nazis now on trial in New York.

Farley Urges Preparedness, Praises Hull

Says 'All Americans Can Agree' on Foreign Policy of Roosevelt

and that he would have Wheeler's support if he sought a third term.

Farley, at Boston, praised the trade agreements negotiated by Secretary Hull and described as "remarkably outstanding" the record of President Roosevelt, Hull and the Administration in keeping America out of war.

He urged that the United States extend financial assistance to its American neighbors for the development of noncompetitive resources, and recommended economic cooperation with the peaceful nations of the world.

Asserting that the Nation's first line of defense is to avoid possibility of involvement in the current war, Farley added:

"Keeping neutral is mighty hard and it is not done by being weak.

"You cannot take anything for granted in this insane war business. For that reason I hope every American will keep constantly in mind the necessity for making sure the war shall not cross the American base line."

Backs Foreign Policy

Although the State committee has entered a slate of delegates pledged to him in the Massachusetts primary on April 30, Farley made no reference in his text either to his own candidacy or to a third term for Mr. Roosevelt.

He made it clear that he was a firm supporter of the Administration's foreign policy.

"I think all Americans can agree," he said, "on the program which President Roosevelt and Secretary Hull have carefully and firmly followed, and which has been carried out by every part of the Government. The program is simple. Anyone can understand it; nobody needs to be afraid of it. It is simply this:

"Complete preparedness for American defense.

"Complete exclusion of aggression of war from the Western Hemisphere.

"Assistance, when necessary, to our American neighbors.

"Maintenance of American neutrality and noninvolvement, without surrender of American rights.

"Steady work toward mutually beneficial commercial relations with those parts of the world which will go along with us in the way of peace.

"Steady insistence that the American interest calls for a world which wants peace, believes in peace, practices peace and is willing to accept international law and good neighborship as the only means of getting it."

Offering his rules for keeping the United States out of war, Farley said that "the simplest, the best and the most sensible way of making sure that no overseas power crosses the American base line is to see to it that everybody on this side of the Atlantic and Pacific oceans is our friend."

At the same time, he maintained that this country must map a long-range plan for use after the war

"Eventually, the world will have to settle down to some sort of peace basis," he said . . . "and the basis of peace will affect us . . . because there is no known way of building a fence around this hemisphere. Other nations want to buy things here, and we want to sell them . . .

Toward a Peaceful World

"The United States has to work constantly toward a world which will be at peace, and in which commerce can flow freely.

"We have made a beginning on that with the trade agreements which Secretary Hull has been negotiating. We have kept our communications through the Postoffice Department freer than any other system of communication in the world. We have avoided, in general, the vicious crime of hatred. We are still working toward a world which aims at protetcing human life, not destroying it."

Republican Candidate Dewey, now on another cross-country campaign trip, said in a press conference at San Francisco, in answer to a question, that "we've got to keep out of war."

"As to how we are going to keep out of war," he added, "that is a matter, first, of giving our attention to our domestic affairs, which are badly in need of attention; secondly, carefully refraining from intervening in the affairs of the rest of the world; and, thirdly, having an adequate defense of our own."

He said that the Nation's defense is "not adequate" at present.

WPA Upheld as American Way By Wheeler; Bridges Asks Shift

Republican Senator Calls for Administration Of Relief by States; Forum Speakers Admit Unemployment Nation's No. 1 Problem

Six Democrats and Republicans last night agreed that relief for the country's 10,000,000 unemployed was the Nation's major job, then split according to party lines on the method of administering the relief.

Senator Burton K. Wheeler (Democrat), of Montana, candidate for the Presidential nomination, defended the WPA system as giving relief "the American way—with jobs instead of doles." He admitted the WPA was no solution for unemployment, but insisted that it was necessary as a relief measure until a solution could be found.

The WPA was denounced by Senator Styles Bridges (Republican), of New Hampshire, also a White House aspirant. He asserted that the New Deal had converted the WPA into a "political football," and presented a program for abolition of the WPA and giving control of relief to local authorities.

Broadcast Over WOL

The debate, held during the American Forum of the Air, broadcast over the Nation via WOL, was presented in the National Press Club auditorium. The panel included Senator Claude Pepper (Democrat), of Florida; Mayor Edward J. Kelly of Chicago, New Deal supporter; Representative Everett M. Dirksen (Republican), of Illinois, and Representative John M. Vorys (Republican), of Ohio.

Wheeler blamed the "debacle of 1929" and the ensuing depression years on the Republican Administration, and said New Deal measures had "staved off revolution."

Federal distribution of relief, Wheeler maintained, began through the Reconstruction Finance Corporation under President Hoover. "But whereas relief was refused to the drought-stricken farmers of Arkansas, and to jobless workers, Federal funds were given freely to railroads, banks and big business interests," he charged.

Expenses Cut, He Says

"Mistakes were made in the WPA—politics were played in some States," declared Senator Wheeler. "But to say that mistakes, corruption, or politics would be less if the program were administered by 48 different States and by 3,000 different counties, or by a local city machine, is ridiculous."

WPA administrative expenses, he said, had been cut to 3.7 per cent, whereas direct relief had cost 10 to 15 per cent.

Senator Bridges averred that "under New Deal's conduct of relief, the exploitation of relief workers has become a demoralizing national scandal." He insisted the most efficient, most economical and least political method of providing relief "lies in the return of administration of relief to States."

First steps toward providing unemployment relief were certainly up to the Federal Government, Bridges said, but added that "it was not necessary to make a permanent Federal bureaucracy which has lost sight of its primary purpose and has become a political weapon of power and control."

The New Hampshire Senator spoke of President Roosevelt's request that Congress allow next year's relief money to be spent in eight months if necessary. "Could the fact that this huge appropriation could be most spent just prior to the coming national elections have anything to do with it?" asked Senator Bridges.

Offers WPA Substitute

In place of the WPA, "which has cost $18,000,000,000," Bridges urged Federal grants-in-aid to States and localities; a definite formula for apportionment of the relief funds; establishment of local nonpartisan relief agencies; setting up of a Federal bureau, bipartisan and limited in personnel, to see that the money is spent for relief purposes only.

The panel discussion got off to a warm start when Mayor Kelly, of the Nash-Kelly machine which practically runs the Democratic Party in Illinois, and Representative Dirksen, Illinois Republican, exchanged views.

Tells of Shoes for Votes

Dirksen wanted to know why the New Deal distributed funds for educational, social security, and agriculture purposes through grants-in-aid to the States and yet refused to do likewise for relief.

Kelly retorted that in Illinois the State Relief Commission was halted from disbursing funds downstate "when it was found that the commission gave out shoes for Republican votes."

The New Deal played politics with pensions as well as relief in Ohio, charged Representative Vorys. He said Ohio lost $1,000,000 in Federal grants toward State pensions because the Administration didn't like Republican Gov. John W. Bricker.

When Kelly responded that Cleveland, with a Republican mayor, received the most Federal relief funds per capita in the country, Vorys rejoined that before a G. O. P. victory in Cleveland the relief rolls totaled 73,000; after, 32,000.

The program was directed by Theodore Granik, with Richard L. Wilson, president of the National Press Club, as chairman.

Election of 'Stooge' for 4 Years Seen by Ickes as 3d Term 'Out'

By the Associated Press

Chicago, April 21.—The possibility of having "a stooge" in the White House to circumvent opposition to a Presidential third term was debated today by Secretary of the Interior Ickes and Gen. Hugh Johnson.

The suggestion that a President of the United States, after serving two terms, might be able to arrange for the election of somebody to act for him was voiced at the University of Chicago's round table broadcast.

"I have no objection to a third term if it is not consecutive," remarked Johnson, former NRA administrator, during a discussion of the third term issue.

Ickes commented:

"I think it is a comfortable 'out,' this distinction between a third consecutive term and a third term after an interval, because if a man is seeking to get control of our institutions and perpetuate himself and his policies in office, it would be perfectly easy for him . . . to elect a stooge at the end of his second term and then come back in after that interval."

The third speaker on the program, William H. Spencer, dean of the university's school of business, commented that Congress can "reassert itself and take back executive powers."

"Theoretically it can," Johnson answered, "but the power of the President becomes so great through lump-sum appropriations and purges and other methods, for a period of time, that this rubber-stamp is a dry and futile right."

WPA Clients Told Votes Are Free

600,000 more would have to be dropped if WPA is to stay within its $1,477,000,000 appropriation for this year.

"I think that it is imperative, with business indices declining as they are now, that we peg the WPA rolls against any further reductions at this time," Pepper declared.

The Florida Senator said he was informed that the WPA had sufficient funds to keep its rolls at the April level until June 15, but would have to have an additional appropriation of from $50,000,000 to $65,000,000 to cover the half month until July 1, when funds for the new fiscal year will become available. He said Congress could transfer that amount from next year's funds if it chose.

Roosevelt Reported Opposed

There were substantial indications that the Pepper plan would have no support from the White House, the Associated Press added.

In fact, it was said in usually well-informed circles that President Roosevelt had put his foot down flatly on any attempts to increase this year's funds when discussing with legislators his decision to ask Congress to make $975,000,000 available for the WPA, to be spent in the eight months beginning July 1, if needed.

Senator Byrnes (Democrat), of South Carolina, who pilots relief bills through the Senate, said he was certain that no request for additional money for the current year would come from the WPA.

Harrington Summoned

Latest WPA estimates were said to indicate also that the present level of relief employment, about 2,100,000 persons, would be reduced only about 350,000 by July 1, instead of the 600,000 Pepper predicted.

A House subcommittee considering the President's relief recommendations for the next fiscal year asked Harrington to appear before it this morning to answer inquiries about the agency's administrative procedure.

Defeat Change In Labor Act, Lewis Urges

Says Amendments All Are Inspired By 'Garner Democrats'

By the Associated Press

John L. Lewis urged C. I. O. members yesterday to work for the defeat of three sets of amendments to the wage-hour law pending in the House, asserting that they were originated by "reactionary Garner Democrats" and were designed to weaken the act.

The proposals—sponsored respectively by the Labor committee, Representative Barden (Democrat), of North Carolina, and Representative Ramspeck (Democrat), of Georgia, are scheduled for House consideration Thursday. All provide various exemptions from the act, their principal point of difference being the extent to which farm processing operations should be exempted.

The Senate has a calendar of minor bills today, and the House will work on District of Columbia legislation. The Senate may take up one of several pending appropriations bills tomorrow, probably the $118,000,000 Interior Department measure.

It was reported, meanwhile, that after a month of negotiation, a Senate-House committee was virtually deadlocked on major items in next year's farm bill.

Although the Senate has numerical supremacy on the conference committee, each side has only one vote on disputed items.

Senator Russell (Democrat), of Georgia, floor leader for the Senate bill and head of its conferees, said that if no way out was seen "we might just reenact last year's farm bill. It was a pretty good one."

Representative Cannon (Democrat), of Missouri, spokesman for the House members of the joint committee, said:

"Things are going along all right but there are lots and lots of different items to consider."

The John L. Lewis report was made in behalf of the C. I. O.'s legislative committee, of which he is chairman.

The report also advocated:

Withholding Government contracts from corporations convicted of violating the Wagner Labor Relations Act. Such an amendment to the Walsh-Healey Act has been passed by the Senate.

Increasing the proposed WPA appropriation to provide jobs for 3,000,000 persons.

Defeat the Walter-Logan bill facilitating court review of orders of Government agencies.

Amendment of the Social Security Act to provide free medical care for low income groups and to extend unemployment compensation benefits.

Passage of the La Follette-Thomas bill outlawing labor spies and professional strikebreakers.

Adoption of antilynching legislation.

Passage of the Geyer bill to wipe outpoll taxes as requirements for voting in national elections.

Defeat of "antialien and other antilabor bills.

Dies Confronts 'Trojan Horse' This Week

Witnesses Will Reveal Plan to Take Over U. S., He Asserts

By the United Press

Chairman Martin Dies (Democrat), of Texas, said last night his un-American Activities Investigating Committee will start hearings this week on a Communist-Nazi "Trojan horse" plot to gain control in the United States.

Dies charged that infiltration of the two "isms" here is "worse than it was in Norway." Everything has been arranged, he said, to take full control of the country "when the time is ripe." He asserted that his committee has in its possession documents showing detailed Communist and Nazi plans to sabotage key points throughout the Nation.

He said witnesses would be brought to tell how Communists and Nazis are working in vital jobs in the Nation's communications, transportation and utilities, prepared to carry out sabotaging instructions when the time comes. He refused to identify the prospective witnesses.

Dies said that when the committee concludes hearings on the domestic "Trojan horse" plot it will turn its attention to a similar conspiracy in Mexico.

He charged that German and Russian agents are working to set up a "puppet government" in Mexico by a revolution immediately following Mexico's July 7 presidential election.

Dies denied that the inquiry would be concerned with Mexico's internal problems, or was designed to influence the outcome of the elections.

Gen. Manuel Avila Camacho, candidate of the Mexican Revolutionary Party, is seeking the Presidency with the backing of President Cardenas. He is opposed by Gen. Juan Andreu Almazan, independent candidate, and by Gen. Joaquin Amaro, secretary of the revolutionary anti-Communist Party. Armaro, however, has not declared his candidacy.

President, Institute of Life Insurance

THE other night I heard a very learned man, on a radio quiz, correctly answer some brain-twisting questions about 18th century literature.

A few days later this expert admitted to a friend that he had never read his life insurance policies, and, in fact, wasn't quite sure where they were at the moment!

It is nice to be in a business which inspires such confidence. But one's life insurance is so important that at least a few things ought to be more widely known about it.

THAT'S WHY the Institute of Life Insurance, which is an organization composed of 90 leading life insurance companies, has bought this space and made it available to me, at advertising rates, to see if I can tell you some interesting things about life insurance.

My job is not to sell insurance, but to help you to an understanding of it, to explain, to inform and perhaps to encourage.

"Answer questions . . . show people how to get full value for their insurance money . . . explain what the public can expect from a good agent . . . help policyholders get the greatest service out of existing insurance . . . and above all try to catch the spirit of service that permeates the life insurance business . . ." These are my instructions.

You might rightfully ask by what right do I talk about life insurance. It's not because it was my privilege to serve as head of the National Association of Life Underwriters. But because for almost 20 years, day in and day out, I've been coming up against the actual problems of policyholders who, like you, take their life insurance for granted.

You're invited to write me on questions that occur to you, at 60 East 42nd St., New York City. I may not be able to answer them all in this column. But I will reply by mail to individual questions, and try to answer here whenever the reply will be helpful to large numbers of policyholders.

The column will appear every Monday in about this same place. Come around next Monday. We're going to talk about the fellow who sells you your life insurance.

Wind Drives Flood Threat From Capital

Rain Water Pushed Downstream; Clear Skies Are Promised

Washington's 24-hour "flood" was just a memory and a lot of mud yesterday as the Potomac and Anacostia rivers abated and the weatherman promised clear skies.

A free-wheeling northwest wind was driving rain water downstream, keeping it from bursting banks and doing more damage to low-lying spots in the Washington area.

At the Leiter gauge, 6 miles above Key Bridge, the Potomac actually did go 1 foot above the 10-foot flood stage, but then began to recede.

11-Foot Crest Predicted

Readings at Sycamore Island showed the river at 10.4 feet in mid-afternoon, and Weather Bureau officials expected it to go as high as 11 feet but no higher.

The same condition was true at other Potomac gauges: the river at the foot of Wisconsin avenue was rising toward a 6-foot high yesterday and at Harper's Ferry at noon it registered 14.3 feet, 4 below flood stage.

The Potomac was still rising during the night but Weather Bureau officials predicted confidently that it would begin falling today.

The Anacostia River gave no cause for alarm. Its northeast branch had shrunk yesterday to a depth of 5 feet from a crest of 8, while inspection by an official of the Geological Survey showed the northwest branch to be way down.

Patuxent Drops Fast

Patuxent River, near Burtonsville, Md., was at the 5-foot level, from a high of almost 9, and it was dropping fast, officials reported.

"There is no more danger," one observer summarized.

The official weather forecast for today was full of cheer for a city that has seen only clouded skies for a week: Clearing wether and somewhat warmer today; tomorrow, increased cloudiness and warmer.

Hundreds Take to Roads

Skies that cleared for a time late yesterday afternoon induced many motorists to brave the slippery roads in and about the city. Hundreds of automobiles, though not the usual numbers, filed around the Tidal Basin for a view of the dying single-flower cherry blossoms.

As warmer, clearer weather waited offstage, National Capital Parks officials assured the public that the cold weather and heavy rains had not damaged chances for brilliant floral displays in Washington parks during the coming weeks.

Double cherry blossoms are still slated to appear along Riverside drive from the Lincoln Memorial and around Hains Point by the end of this week. Narcissus beds are in full bloom from Eighteenth to Twenty-first streets on Pennsylvania avenue.

Flood Control Urged

In the wake of the high water, Prince Georges County civic leaders asked Senators Tydings and Radcliffe to use their influence in speeding up preparation of cost estimates by Army engineers which will be the basis for a Congressional appropriation for the Anacostia Valley flood control program.

Fred W. Gast, chairman of both the Prince Georges Chamber of Commerce flood control committee and the waterway committee of the county's Federation of Citizens Associations, wrote letters to the Senators asking them to help Army engineers collect the necessary data. Gast said the engineers had been hampered in securing information on volume of water.

Train-Wreck Toll Put at 30; 3 Investigations Are Ordered

U. S. and New York State to Conduct Joint Inquiry, Railroad and County To Study Cause of Express Crash

By the Associated Press

Little Falls, N. Y., April 21.—The death toll in the derailment of the New York Central Lake Shore Limited was officially set at 30 today as authorities planned three separate investigations into the disaster.

The crowded hospital in this historic Mohawk Valley community, where injured were treated on mat-strewn floors yesterday, reported 33 of the approximately 100 hurt were still under observation, some in serious condition.

A weary crew of 300 labored in ankle-deep slush to untangle the locomotive, tender, express car and two Pullmans which still remained at the sharp curve where the train left the tracks at 59 miles an hour and crashed into a stone embankment late Friday night.

The body of Eugene Rohmer, of Lancaster, N. Y., was removed from the wreckage this afternoon. However, railroad officials struck the name of "Mrs. L. Berg, Syracuse, N. Y.," from their death list. Spokesman for the line explained the body of a woman at first believed to be that of Mrs. Berg was later identified as Miss Elizabeth McCarthy, of Utica, N. Y.

All of the 30 bodies recovered were identified as rescue workers continued to pry into the twisted metal mass of the fast New York-Chicago flyer. Officials believed, however, that there was little likelihood of any bodies remaining in the wreckage still to be cleared.

An investigation will be conducted jointly tomorrow in Albany, N. Y., by the Interstate Commerce Commission and the State Public Service Commission.

Another inquiry was to be started by the railroad, which previously announced the locomotive's speedometer tape showed the train hit the rock-bound curve at 59 miles an hour, 14 miles an hour faster than the limit established for this point, sharpest on the system.

The third will be conducted by Herkimer County Coroner Fred C. Sabin, tentatively scheduled for tomorrow.

When's a Machine Not a Machine? Kelly Explains

Mayor Edward J. Kelly, of Chicago, who, with Patrick A. Nash, is generally reputed to run the Democratic Party in Illinois, flatly denied last night there was such a thing as a "Nash-Kelly machine."

Asked point blank about it during the American Forum of the Air broadcast from the National Press Club, the New Deal supporter declared:

C.A.R. Pilgrims Lay Wreaths On 3 Tombs

200 Go to Mt. Vernon, Also Honor Soldier Of Revolution

More than 200 members and friends of the Children of the American Revolution journeyed to Mount Vernon, with a stop at Old Presbyterian Metting House, in Alexandria, Va., yesterday to lay a wreath on the tomb of the Unknown Soldier of the American Revolution.

The pilgrimage was part of the regular program of the forty-fifth annual convention of the society which opened its sessions Friday and will conclude this morning in Memorial Continental Hall.

Yesterday at Alexandria Mrs. William A. Becker, national vice president, paid tribute to members of the organization. Tribute was paid also to honorary national president Mrs. Frank W. Mondell, and past national vice president Mrs. Frederick W. Menges.

Exercises at the Alexandria tomb were in charge of Mrs. Frank S. Ray. After placement of the wreath, a gift of National Chaplin William Henry Belk, the history of the tomb was read by Mary Julia Trupiano, Michigan junior State president. Taps was sounded by Edward A. Morris, jr., of the Jinnie Jackson Society, of New Jersey.

Salute of cadets at the memorial services was performed by Jack F. Bennett, Jerome A. Lee, jr., John W. Townsend, jr., and T. Hunton Leith, jr.

At Mount Vernon the procession to the Washingotn tomb was led by Colorbearers Rodney Parker Harrington, of Old Trails Society, West Virginia, and Charles Bennett Wilson 3d, of Oklahoma City Society.

Gwynedd Gordon Wood placed the wreath, a gift of the Independence Hall Society, of Pennsylvania, on the grave of George Washington, while Marina Simson, of the Columbia Society, Oregon, placed a wreath, gift of the Oregon Grandmothers' Committee, on the grave of Martha Washington.

Former Gov. Davis Pays Speed Fine After 2-Mile Chase

Former Gov. Westmoreland Davis and Mrs. Davis, of Virginia, arrived at their Leesburg home yesterday at snail's pace, after paying a speeding fine of $10 and costs in Burlington, N. J., on behalf of their colored chauffuer, Wilbur Mallory. They assumed blame for the offense and complimented the New Jersey justice on doing his duty.

Stopped Saturday after a 2-mile chase past Burlington, Mallory pleaded guilty to driving at 65 miles an hour. Mrs. Davis reached into her handbag to pay the fine and costs.

"It seemed much slower coming home," Mrs. Davis said yesterday in Leesburg. The party was returning from New York.

Food, Drug Rule Clears Desks For Transfer

Drive on to Finish Work Before Shift To Farm Department

By Edward Ryan
Post Staff Writer

An easy-breathing spell has come to officials of the Food and Drug Administration while they prepare for transfer as proposed in the President's fourth reorganization plan.

The order, transferring the agency from the Agriculture Department to the Federal Security Agency, spells a chance to catch up with back work.

Two hearings on proposed food regulations have been canceled, and a drive is on to finish other regulations (already nearly complete) for Secretary Wallace's signature before the shift is made.

Hearings Canceled

Hearings canceled were those on proposed rules for special dietary foods, and flour standards. This was done, it was explained, because the agency could not complete the regulations before the transfer, and it was felt the new agency should have right of way to start new business.

While new work is being held off, there is plenty of the old to clean up, officials said. Regulations are in the making for dairy products, including cheese, and there are new rules for canned tomatoes, to be finished before transfer.

In one department the agency has been slowing down, it was admitted. Supplies of stationery, headed with the words "U. S. Department of Agriculture," are being ordered on a day-to-day schedule.

No longer on the war path, the fighting Jicarilla Indians have taken a turn into easy street, according to the Indian Office.

The Jicarillas, a tribe of the Apaches, are on the receiving end of three ten-year leases, under which a Denver oil company will pay the tribe some $15,000 outright, and $1.25 yearly for each 5,000 acres for the rights to look for oil. If oil is found, and Indian officials say there is a good chance, the tribe will receive its rent, or one-eighth of royalties, whichever is larger.

While this wampum is big news for the 733 Jicarillas, officials in the Indian Office here as mostly pleased that the tribe has agreed to pool its individual holdings and to act as a unit. Once among the most savage Indian fighters the tribe surprised the Indian Office by agreeing to operate as a tribal corporation under the Indian Reorganization Act.

Ran Trading Post

They were helped into it, officials recalled, by their late "godfather," Emmett Wirt, a native German who ran a trading post for the tribe for many years. A story-book character, Wirt kept in the role of gun-toting pioneer, was known to have lassoed a creditor to force a pay-off. When the reorganization plan was suggested, he sold his store to the tribe, and helped start the new program.

Since then, officials said, the Jicarillas have been among the most successful Indian businessmen, while developing large-scale sheep raising.

Advantage of the tribal lease, officials said, will be to give all the members a share in the expected oil profits, and avoid troubles of other tribes. One case history of these troubles is that of the Creek Indians, where some individuals struck it rich while their neighbors remained in poverty.

Charles Tainter, Bell Associate, Dies in California

San Diego, Calif., April 21 (AP).—Charles Sumner Tainter, 85, physicist and inventor once associated with Alexander Graham Bell, died last night.

With his hard wax disk record, Tainter was credited with having made phonographs commercially possible. He was the inventor of the distograph and was first to transmit sound through the agency of light. He also was known as the "father of the talkies."

Bell and Tainter went to Washington, D. C., and organized the Volta Laboratory Association, where they worked on inventions, including the graphophone. In 1905, Tainter came to San Diego to retire. His widow, Laura F. Tainter, survives.

Woman Dies of Hurts in Train-Auto Wreck; Two D. C. Men Rescued From Burning Car

4 Injured as Machines Break Pole, Leap Bank, Hit Walkers

Two Washington men yesterday were pulled to safety from their blazing automobile, after a collision with another machine in the 4500 block of Benning road northeast. Three persons were injured in the crash.

A woman died of injuries received last week in a train-car crash in Virginia and four persons were hurt in Washington traffic.

Joseph B. Winston, 38, of Landover, Md., was killed by a hit-run automobile near Suffolk, Va. He was a painter at the Norfolk Naval Air Station.

John A. Davis, 23, of 1200 N street northwest, was the driver of the burned car. It was destroyed by flames that swept it after the gasoline tank exploded. The Davis machine had been in collision with an auto operated by Claude E. Morgan, 26, of 1210 Eighteenth street northwest, police reported.

Lewis Baker, attendant at a gasoline station, rushed to the scene and dragged out Davis and a passenger, Paul Ridnour, 22, of 518 Quintana place northwest.

Taken to Providence Hospital by a passing motorist, Ridnour was under treatment yesterday for face cuts and first and second degree burns of the face, neck and hands. His condition was described as fair.

Davis was treated at Providence for face and scalp cuts, while Morgan was given first aid at the scene for cuts about the left eye.

Fannie Palmer, colored, 38, of Seminary Hill, Fairfax County, Va., died at Georgetown Hospital of injuries received Friday. Arlington County police said her automobile was struck by a Washington & Old Dominion freight train at Seminary road crossing.

In another accident, a car driven by Paul Fitzgerald, 29, of 1825 Clydesdale place northwest, was in collision with with a machine operated by Charles Meyers, of 1521 Corcoran street northwest. The latter auto caromed into a lamp post at Ninth street and Massachusetts avenue northwest. The steel pole was broken off.

Meyers was treated at Emergency Hospital for face cuts.

Howard Heffron, 33, of 644 Maryland avenue southwest, received head injuries and face and neck lacerations, when his car plunged over an embankment and overturned on Naylor road southeast, 200 feet north of the District line, according to police. Heffron was treated at Providence Hospital.

Felled by a car at Military road and Connecticut avenue northwest, Norman Wallace, 28, of Friendship, Md., suffered cuts of the face and scalp, concussion of the brain and a possible skull fracture. His condition was called serious at Emergency Hospital. Driver of the car was Wiley Narron, 26, of 1601 R street northwest, police reported.

Eight-year-old Carl Conradi, of 310 Delafield place northwest, was struck down at New Hampshire avenue and Buchanan street northwest, by a car operated by Bennie Davis, 27, of 4933 First street northwest, police said. The child received head injuries, cuts and bruises.

Justice Gordon Improved

Justice Peyton Gordon, of District Court, critically ill of a heart ailment at his home, 2139 Wyoming avenue northwest, had improved last night, his physician, Dr. J. Lawn Thompson, jr., declared.

Higher Wages to Redistribute Wealth Urged by Msgr. Ryan

The Right Rev. John A. Ryan yesterday urged greater redistribution of America's wealth and stricter economic planning.

Addressing the Communion breakfast at the nineteenth annual convention of the Newman Club Federation, Middle Atlantic Province, at Hotel 2400, he recommended, among other things, an increase of wages through extension of labor organizations and voluntary pay raises by employers.

He is director of the department of social action of the National Catholic Welfare Conference.

"If one-half of the national income now paid out in dividends and interest were converted into higher wages for labor and higher prices for farmers," he said, "the improved income of business through increased sale of goods would very greatly benefit employment."

Justice Harold M. Stephens, of the United States Court of Appeals, also spoke. The Newman Club Federation closed a three-day program yesterday with benediction at the Franciscan Monastery.

A George Washington University student Edward V. Kiley, was elected general chairman of the convention, marking the first time G. W. has been so represented. Kiley is retiring president of the local Newman Club. Two other Washington students, were also elected: Rita Raley, chosen as corresponding secretary, and Charles Ferry, elected fourth vice chairman.

Ex-Gov. Kohler Of Wisconsin Found Dead

Industrialist's Body Discovered by Wife; Heart Attack Blamed

By the Associated Press

Kohler, Wis., April 21.—Walter J. Kohler, chairman of the board of the Kohler Co. and a former Republican Governor of Wisconsin, was found dead in the bedroom of his home by Mrs. Kohler today.

The former Governor, who was 65, apparently had been in good health.

He was known nationally as a politician, industrialist, aviation enthusiast and manufacturer.

Dr. Wesley Van Zanten, Sheboygan County coroner, said death was due to coronary embolism.

Mrs. Kohler told the authorities that she found the body of her husband alongside the bed. He apparently had died just after he arose to get dressed this morning. His death occurred in his country estate, Riverbend, at the foot of the hill on which the model village of Kohler is built.

Mr. Kohler had served as chairman of the Wisconsin Finnish Relief Committee and was a friend of former President Hoover, who headed the national organization.

Mr. Kohler was among the 53 individuals indicted by a Federal grand jury in Cleveland last month in connection with the Justice Department's investigation of what it termed high construction costs. Only last Friday, Mr. Kohler furnished bond in the Cleveland case, which charged conspiracy to restrain trade in the plumbing industry in violation of the antitrust laws.

In 1928 Mr. Kohler was elected Governor. After he took office in 1929, he was charged with having violated the Corrupt Practices Act by excessive campaign expenditures, but at his trial the following year he was acquitted by a unanimous jury verdict.

He lost the Republican nomination in 1930 to Philip F. LaFollette, then leader of the Progressive Republican faction, who was elected Governor. Mr. Kohler defeated the youthful La Follette in 1932 for the Republican nomination.

Captured 'Chute Troops Have Bikes, Cameras, Radios

London (Monday), April 22 (AP).—German parachute troops captured at Dombas, in central Norway, carried a surprising amount and variety of equipment, Exchange Telegraph said. It listed collapsible bicycles, machineguns, radio transmitters and receivers, saws, wire cutters, cameras and gas welding apparatus.

The Germans were reported to have captured 50 civilians, whom they forced to carry their equipment, and to have occupied a farm before they were routed by hand grenades. The news agency said 150 surrendered after 25 had been killed and a number wounded.

Oldest Church Given Flag By Daughters

Donors' Organization Lauded as Keeping Patriotism Alive

Patriotic achievements of the Daughters of American Colonists were lauded yesterday, as that organization's local chapter dedicated an American flag and pole at St. Paul's Episcopal Church, Rock Creek Parish. Founded in 1712, it is the oldest Protestant church here.

For doing "so much to arouse and keep alive the spirit of patriotism in this country" the Daughters should be commended, Col. George H. Calvert, jr., president of the Maryland State Society and principal speaker, said.

Earlier, Dr. Franklin J. Bohanan, rector of St. Paul's, formally accepted the flag and pole from Mrs. David D. Caldwell, State regent of the Society. The District Chapter donated the pole.

Mrs. Enoch Johnson, flag donor, helped raise the colors; Elizabeth Caldwell Kimberly and Charles Bryant Grove, jr., did the unveiling, and David R. Caldwell 3d, bugler, gave the call to the corps. The Metropolitan Police Boys Club Band, directed by Sergt. Forrest Binswanger, played.

Among others participating were Mrs. Charles McCarthy, newly elected national president of the society; Mrs. William F. Stone and Mrs. Joseph S. Calfee, honorary presidents; the Rev. Charles W. Wood, pastor of St. Paul's.

Mrs. Harry C. Grove served as general chairman.

New Record Disappoints Flier

Scalise, Building Union Chief, Arrested on Order of Dewey for Extortion

officials had been named as co-conspirators with Scalise. They are Izzy Schwartz, Scalise's Eastern representative, and his brother, Louis Schwartz, president of Local 32-J of the union.

They have been indicted for extortion conspiracy, Gurfein said, and released in $6,000 bail each.

Scalise's secretary, Ann Kimmler, picked up last night as a material witness, was released from the Woman's House of Detention in bail of $20,000 also provided by the union, at the same time Scalise was released.

Dewey's aides said that the arrest was made on his order, in a telephone call yesterday from San Francisco, where he is campaigning.

The labor leader had no opportunity to comment formally on the charge. He was clad in white silk pajamas and was given time to get dressed and hustled to a police station for booking, then to police headquarters for fingerprinting, and then arraigned in General Sessions before Judge Jacob Gould Schurman, jr.

Sitting as a committing magistrate, the judge adjourned the case until Tuesday, and then, sitting as a General Sessions judge, he heard arguments on bail.

At the arraignment, his lawyer, John Kadel, said that Scalise was "prepared to defend all charges," remarked that "there may be political implications in this prosecution, but I will discuss that later," and asked for an immediate hearing.

"This is good campaign material," he continued. "This prosecution is rampant with politics. Scalise has been pilloried by Dewey and the press."

(After the arraignment Scalise remarked that he had been "Peglerized," referring to recent columns in which Westbrook Pegler attacked his union administration.)

An assistant district attorney said Scalise's record was of "paramount importance" in the question of bail since, under the New York law, as a second offender, he was liable to 15-30 years if convicted.

"The important aspect of this case," he said, "is that the power of the union was used as an instrumentality in extortion."

Asked about his recently purchased Ridgefield, Conn., place, which Pegler has been chiding him about as over-affluent, Scalise said he bought it because he had wanted a place for his parents and that it was "a good buy."

The assistant district attorney described Scalise's career at the bail hearing, as "a process of marvelous growth."

"His rise was phenomenal," he said. "In 1934 he became international representative. In 1935 he became fifth vice president. And in 1937 he was catapulted into the presidency.

High Court May Rule on Strike Liability Today

Decision Possible On Apex Appeal For Union Damages

By the Associated Press

The Supreme Court may decide today whether a labor union which engages in a sit-down strike is liable for damages under the Sherman Anti-Trust Act.

This question was presented to the tribunal in an appeal by the Apex Hosiery Co., of Philadelphia, which sought damages from a local unit of the American Federation of Full Fashioned Hosiery Workers as a result of a seven week sitdown strike in 1937.

A Federal district court awarded the company a $711,932 judgment. But the Federal Circuit Court at Philadelphia held that damages could not be awarded under the 1890 Sherman Act because there had been no intent by the union to restrain interstate commerce.

The Circuit Court said in the Apex opinion that the sitdown strike was illegal and it had no doubt that the union "should be compelled to answer in damages" in a State court.

Some of the other cases that may be decided by the Supreme Court today involve:

1. The Justice Department's anti-trust suit charging 12 major oil companies and five individuals with conspiring to raise the price of gasoline sold in 10 Midwestern States. They were convicted in the Federal District Court at Madison, Wis., but the circuit court ordered a new trial.

2. Whether playing to Catholics a phonograph record attacking that church constitutes a breach of the peace in New Haven, Conn. A conviction was sustained by the Connecticut Supreme Court of Errors.

3. Validity of an agreement under which San Francisco transfers to a private power corporation electric energy generated at the Hetch Hetchy hydroelectric project. The Federal Government contends the agreement violates the 1913 Raker Act regulating distribution of the power. The city won in the Federal Circuit Court.

4. Constitutionality of legislation regulating picketing in Alabama and Shasta County, Calif. It was unsuccessfully challenged in lower courts on the ground that it violates freedom of speech.

Dutch Belittle Indies Issue

ject themselves into the East Indies."

This comment dovetails with the viewpoint the Dutch here hold regarding their homeland. They will permit no one to make the slightest intrusion upon their neutrality and independence.

"We have been preparing ourselves for some such showdown for a long time," the high official said, continuing:

"The world apparently underestimates our capacity for resistance at home or in the Far East.

70,000 Troops in East

"We have around 70,000 soldiers in the East Indies, most of them well-trained, disciplined natives with Dutch regulars.

"There is a modern coast defense at all important harbors with three cruisers, 24 submarines, a large number of destroyers, several excellent squadrons of Martin (American-made) bombers and more than 200 seaplanes.

"An invasion would be a long-time major operation. We would blow up the oil wells of Borneo and it would take Japan at least a year to reopen them even if she captured the islands.

"Everybody Looks the Same"

"I insist that Holland isn't going to be bullied or thrown off balance. Everybody looks the same to us. We are determined to look after our own destiny."

Then he slyly added:

"Of course, if the situation regarding Japan should be dangerous—which we do not look for at present—then America by a total two-way embargo alone could bring tremendous pressure against Japan.

"But we are not telling America her business. She is quite able to take care of herself, but she must understand how much the Allies would like to involve her in a Japanese war and thus into the European war by way of the back door."

British Bombers Blast Nazi Air Bases in Norway, Denmark

Berlin Says 5 Enemy Cruisers, 10 Destroyers, 8 Submarines Sunk

By the Associated Press

Berlin, April 21.—Germany and Great Britain apparently were in a race tonight to see which could occupy most of Norway before coming to decisive grips.

Military observers here, speculating on the purpose of an Allied force reported landed at the west Norwegian port of Andalsnes, said the strategy probably was to try to establish contact with Norwegians in central Norway.

The strategic importance of the central region lies in its valleys, which afford reasonably good communications in the mountainous kingdom, and the railroad connecting Hamar and Andalsnes.

Unanswerable here was the question of the Allied expeditionary forces or whether the severe air bombing, which the Germans said they had administered yesterday, had crippled their effectiveness.

Claim British Losses

In the 12 days of action in Scandinavian waters, Germany in unofficial reports has said she has inflicted the following losses on the British fleet:

Five cruisers, ten destroyers and eight submarines sunk.

One cruiser beached.

Four battleships, seven battle and heavy cruisers, one light cruiser and one airplane carrier badly damaged.

As many as seven British transport ships sunk or damaged.

The air force accounted for the lion's share of these claims.

(The British have denied most of the German claims but have acknowledged the sinking of four destroyers in naval fights.)

Today's high command communique described an air attack yesterday on British forces landing at Namsos and Andalsnes as "of extraordinary effectiveness."

At Andalsnes, it said, a cruiser was sunk by a heavy air bomb and another, set afire, was beached. "At another place," a 15,000-ton troop transport was said to have been set afire "by numerous bombs," and another listed after being hit.

Troops Attacked

"British military units which landed," the communique said, "were attacked by bombs at two places and suffered heavy losses of men and materials. The railway stations at Namsos and Andalsnes were set afire, highways and bridges were destroyed by bombs."

The high command also reported several small Norwegian war vessels sunk in Hardanger Fjord by German sea forces, a land battery silenced there, and a former Polish destroyer sunk by a German submarine northeast of the Shetland Islands.

With the Allies having a foothold at Andalsnes and Namsos, there seemed at least a theoretical possibility that the Germans at Trondheim, Narvik and other regions in northern Norway might be cut off from their southern forces.

Reserves on March

On the basis of German reports, however, it appeared that a mighty Allied military effort would be necessary to achieve such a purpose in view of the steady stream of German reinforcements stated to be pouring into Oslo, gateway to central Norway.

The high command said "transport of men and materials to Norway continues at increased tempo" and that reinforced German troops were fanning out wider in every direction from Oslo.

Infantry and artillery reinforcements, it said, are being sent to Trondheim and Germans in the Bergen and Stavanger coastal areas are extending the occupied zone "and wiping up smaller Norwegian forces."

Germans professed to be undisturbed by the prospect that their northern troops might be isolated.

English Ship Sunk; No Casualties, London Report Declares

By the Associated Press

London, April 21.—British forces were reported tonight to have blasted at both ends of Germany's aerial ferry to Norway and thrust into the heart of the invaded northern kingdom in a dash by mobile troops.

The war in the air was told in British communiques which reported the bombing of German airfields in Norway and Denmark. German attacks on Allied forces in which a British trawler went down at Namsos, Norway, about 100 miles up the Norwegian coast from German-held Trondheim, and the shooting down of four—and possibly six—German warplanes on the Western Front.

The air ministry said the British were unscathed in the aerial battles over the Western Front except for one slightly wounded flier who made a successful forced landing.

Bombs Airfields

Aalborg in northern Denmark and Kristiansand and Stavanger in southwestern Norway, main line points on the 300-mile military air transport system Germany uses to feedmen and munitions to the north, were targets of a concerted offensive last night and this morning.

The German high command in Denmark announced British planes "in different intervals attacked the airdrome at Aalborg" last night but were repulsed by antiaircraft fire without doing damage. The Aalborg airdrome is in North Jutland, 60 miles from Skagen.

Planes, runways and buildings were damaged, a communique from the British Air Ministry said. It added that "all of the large number of aircraft engaged in the operations" had returned safely to their bases.

Control of the air became increasingly important as Britain rushed troops across the North Sea to Norwegian landing points.

No Troop Casualties

A joint Admirality-War Office communique tonight said that Germans had caused heavy damage yesterday at Namsos, Norway, but that the only Allied loss was one British trawler, the Rutlandshire, sunk. It said there were "no casualties to Allied troops."

The War Office, beyond a noncommittal communique, continued close-mouthed on actual operations of the Allied expeditionary force. Tonight's communique merely said:

"Operations in Norway are continuing. British troops are operating in conjunction with Norwegian forces."

One of the pilots who participated in the attack at Aalborg, said the Germans were taken by surprise.

"The boundary lights were on," he said, "and so were the obstruction lights on the buildings. There also was a path of flares set out."

"They obviously were not expecting us and we met no opposition of any kind," the flier continued.

While bombs thundered down on faraway Scandinavian airfields, shells bursting over a town on England's southeast coast sent the 3,000 residents scurrying for shelter and punched shrapnel holes in roofs.

No casualties were reported in the town and no bombs were dropped on land during the encounter in which antiaircraft batteries and naval guns fired on German planes. The raid lasted for three hours last night and early today.

The gunfire, heaviest along the coast since the start of the war, made many think that the town was being shelled from the sea. Among the roofs damaged was that of the police station. Once during the raid a huge German bomber flew over the town with shells bursting around it.

In the raid of the Kristiansand airfield, the British were reported to have dropped "large numbers of high explosive bombs" principally along the line of the runway.

Ringside Table — With Mary Harris

"DUKE UNIVERSITY NIGHT" will be tossed high, wide and pretty in the Wardman Metronome Room tomorrow evening. That resounding Duke alumnus, Maestro Les Brown, and his orchestra will greet all comers (even if they're from the University of South Carolina) with plain and rhythm bedecked versions of the triumph song of Duke. Among the crowds of local Duke alumni who'll turn out for the occasion will doubtless be five who were members of Brown's Band during their college days. The Duke clan has been around Metronome ever since Les Brown opened, but tomorrow night they'll be out in force. P. S.—Les Brown's engagement will run a full three weeks in Wardman's "Band Parade." He'll wind up on Thursday, May 2, with Don Bestor's Band arriving on the following eve.

POT O' GOLD IN CARLTON. Tomorrow eve the Horace Heidt band will rush up to the Carlton between their shows at the Capitol Theater and broadcast their national Pot o' Gold program.

THIS WEEK'S SHOWS. Shoreham. The two Aileens will fly in from Chicago to head the new Blue Room revue starting tonight. Last-minute rumors were that those champion dude wranglers, Dick Nash and Janet Evans, also Wilson Lang, fine tenor, would remain in the show.

Lotus. The "Blossom Revue" will be supplemented by the Royal Duo, skating fiends. Gagster Hal Reed and those can-canners superb, the Gibsons, will remain. Watch out for the Guy Martin dancers in their Brazilian "Zava."

Casino Royal. All new revue headed by the "Five Dancing Darlings." Harmony singing by the Reeves Sisters and Morris. Also other specialty acts.

LUCKY TONY. Troika's all-knowing Leo scored strongly with Tony Beacon, head man of "Beau," Washington's newest and glossiest magazine, when he said, "The luckiest break you ever had was when you didn't get married on such-and-such a date." We hear that Leo was completely accurate.

TEE! HEE! Letter from Peggy Wood, the noted stage and operetta star. "Imagine my surprise at seeing a picture of Peggy Wood, in your column labeled 'Miami Songstress.' Golly, what a discovery! Somewhere during the years I must have been sleep walking. Or however did I get to Miami? Well, life consistently does the unexpected but I came to Washington as a vice president of Actors' Equity to try to induce Congress to remove the legislative provision excluding actors from relief (the only class of workers so stigmatized) and find I've been singing in the King Cole Room all the time." Note. It's another pretty Peggy Wood at the King Cole. Stage star Peggy Wood is just having her fun.

TEE! HEE! AGAIN. Pall Mall's Maestro Bert Bernath (who happens to wear a white tie and tails just like the Pall Mall waiters) was hailed the other eve by a patron who said briskly, "Find out the time the trains leave for Baltimore, will you?" Obligingly Bert went out and sent the customer a half-bushel of time tables, says he's going to get a megaphone like a regular station announcer for the benefit of visiting Baltimoreans.

HELEN REILLY, springtime singer at the Mayfair

THINGS YOU OUGHT TO KNOW. Dick Koons and his Mayflower Lounge orchestra are playing the two prettiest tunes from "It's a Date," Deanna Durbin's newest pic. They're "Love Is All" and "It Happened in Kaloha" . . . The new head waiter in the Lounge Riviera is Don Stoos who used to be at the Carlton . . . Madrillon is ready for a special celebration of "National Restaurant Week" which occurs some time in May . . . That pretty girl you saw riding around the Tidal Basin yesterday might have been Lynn Allison, singer at the Robin Hood . . . Anchor Room's Matt Windsor and Maryland State Senator John White, who's also an excellent tenor, sang for the children's benefit at the Thomson School.

BROOKE JOHNS REFORMS PIRATES. "There'll be no pirates around here!" shouts the Flag Ship's Brooke Johns. So he's rounding up the few remaining pirates of the former Pirate's Den and putting them into English coachmen's uniforms.

OFF-BANDSTAND ANGLES. Mayfair's Lyle Smith Trio rehearses three nights a week—and they have interesting circles under their eyes on the following days . . . Milton Davis and the Rainbow Room orchestra spend all their week-ends down at Old Point Comfort talking to sea captains—they say . . . Paul Kain, Glen Echo's king of rhythm, collects Charvet neckties and Van Gogh prints . . . Leader Bill Dowler, of the Nightingale, plans to spend his Monday nights off in Wardman's Metronome Room while the "Band Parade" progresses . . .

NEPTUNE'S BILL. The glamour lad of the Neptune Room, Bill Levy, used to be Winnie Lightner's publicity man. He and his brother, Bernie, operated Washington night clubs and now own a popular spot in Miami.

FASCINATING FIGURES: You can get a delicious boned shad luncheon at the pleasant Harrington Tavern for only 35 cents . . . Your good time at Maynard's will be made better by the consciousness that the lobster dinner is only costing you six bits . . . And the excellent chile con carne at Dick's Grill will only set you back the price of two packs of cigarettes.

Swedes Down Nazi Plane, Two Burned

Fliers Photographing Forts, Press Charges; Blackout Ordered

By the Associated Press

Stockholm, April 21.—Increasing German aerial violations of Swedish territory in which one plane was shot down and two others burned after forced landings tonight are deliberate and for the purpose of photographing Swedish fortifications, the Goteborg Posten declared.

The paper, largest in western Sweden, called for greater Swedish aerial defense, noting that Germany's Fuehrer Hitler has remarked that a country which fails to defend its neutrality cannot be considered a neutral.

Two German planes flew over the fortified islands off Goteborg tonight and one of them, ignoring warning shots of the neutrality guard, proceeded inland where a Swedish plane shot it down 15 miles northwest of Goteborg. The crew of four was rescued.

The other plane disappeared into the clear night.

The other German planes made forced landings on Gotland Island, in the Baltic Sea, and were burned by their crews, who were interned.

Several other planes crossed over Swedish territory, but heeded warning shots.

(A Stockholm radio report heard in London said south central Sweden was blacked out as the aerial violations increased.)

Nazi Fliers Interned

Basel, Switzerland, April 21 (AP).—A German bombing plane, returning from a long reconnaissance flight over France, ran out of gas today and landed amid a group of Swiss solders on the runway of Basel's civil airport—only 3 miles from the Rhine frontier.

The German officer and thre men surrendered immediately and will be interned for the duration of the war.

Belgians to Protest

Brussels, April 21 (AP).—Aerial activity over Belgian territory by German and English planes was noted today and last night by the government, which announced it would protest to Berlin and London.

Yesterday the government said it would send protests to Berlin and Paris after a battle of four war planes near the Belgian-French frontier.

Norway Reports Hamar Retaken

vik, across Mjosa Lake from Hamar.)

The Norwegian military communique last night, however, said the Germans had only attacked Lillehammer repeatedly Saturday night and today with planes firing machine guns. One house near the railway station in the well-known and beautiful tourist town was set afire, the communique said.

The Norwegian news agency, Norsk Telegrambyro, reported from "somewhere in Norway" that British troops have been in full ontact with Norwegian forces since Saturday in the Gudbrandsdal Valley.

The communique said the Germans dropped bombs at different times again Sunday on the harbor of Andalsnes. One German plane was shot down north of Trondheim, the communique added.

The communique said the Germans "attacked our positions on both sides of Mjosa Lake, supported by artillery and planes. We held our positions."

[Lake Mjosa is a narrow body of water some 60 miles long, running roughly northwestward from Eidsvold, about 40 miles north and east of Oslo. Hamar is about midway of its eastern shore, along which runs the Oslo-Trondheim Railway. Lillehammer is at the northern tip of the lake, also on the railway, a branch of which runs from Dombas to Andalsnes.

[Thus if the Germans actually have taken Lillehammer, they have cut the communications between the Allied force on the Hamar front and their base. On the other hand, the German claim may be based on possible operations of a small mobile force rushed around the fighting lines in an attempt to cut the railway, an objective also sought by their bombing planes.—Editor's note.]

The Hegra fortress commander, past whose post the Germans slipped an expedition by train last week to reach the Swedish frontier and cut Norway in two, was reported having to battle on two sides, but was given a good chance by military observers to hold the enemy at bay for a long time because of the favorable terrain. The fortress is set in rock and thick walls.

Nazis Land at Narvik

Reports from Kiruna, Swedish ore city on the railroad leading to Norwegian port of Narvik, said a steady stream of German transport planes had been landing troops in Narvik. Twenty transports were said to have landed Friday, 15 Saturday and 3 Sunday.

The reports said German forces in Narvik were estimated at 3,000, while the British have landed 5,000 troops at Harstad, 35 miles northwest.

Many German planes also were reported to have flown to the district around Trondheim, 100 miles north of Andalsnes.

Reports that two Nazi destroyers and six German steamers sailed through the Allied mine belt to Oslo after a space was cleared by seven captured Norwegian whaleships came from the southwestern Swedish city of Goteborg.

The reports said the whaleships were rigged up as mine sweepers and sent southward. While they were working many planes circled above the spot. When the whaleships finished, the Nazi destroyers and steamers sailed through. It was not reported whether the steamers were carrying troops.

Germans Extend Zone

Oslo, April 21 (AP).—The Germans appeared tonight to have pushed their occupied zone north of Oslo as far as theopen, rolling ridges of the Hadeland district.

This advance has military significance because the Hadeland district gives the German forces access to the fertile Totten counties, to the northwest of which lies Opland Province and the strategic Valdres Valley.

Evidence of the Germans' progress was seen in the requisitioning of almost all buses today to bring refugees back to Oslo from the Randsfjord Lakes region, more than 30 miles to the north.

This advance means that the Germans have carved a huge pie slice out of southern Norway, by far the most important area of the kingdom.

Holds Bulk of Industries

The German-occupied territory contains about 1,600,000 inhabitants—half of Norway's population—and the great bulk of her biggest industrial enterprises. Among them are important hydro-electric plants, nitrogen works, paper and pulp mills, and most of her harbors, shipyards ad drydocks.

With Oslo as the hub, the occupied area roughly describes an arc starting in Oistfold Province, bordering Sweden in the southeast corner of Norway, and swinging north and west through Akershus, Buskerud, Vestfold, Telemark, Austagder and Vestagder Provinces.

Besides these, which appear to be under German control completely, the Nazis are said also to hold most of Rogalnad Province, on the Atlantic coast.

Thus, the whole coast from the Swedish border west along the Skagerrak and north up the Atlantic seaboard, at least to Stavanger, appears to be in German hands.

Italy Uncomfortable as Duce Offers Slogan: 'Labor, Arms'

By Herbert L. Matthews

Copyright by New York Times

Rome, April 21.—Rome celebrated its birthday today with the uneasy feeling that it faces one of the most fateful of its approximately 2,700 years of history. Danger was seething below the calm of this beautiful spring day, with its many ceremonies to commemorate what is also Italy's labor day.

The Duce came out on the balcony at noon and told 75,000 cheering workers in the Piazza Venezia that "the password of the Italian people from the mountains to the sea is 'work and arm.'"

Giovanni Ansaldo, who again addressed the armed forces as he did last Sunday, stuck by his warning that war might come soon and told his listeners that all their hopes lay in the arms they carried.

French Bid Ignored

Even more ominous in a negative way was the fashion in which the Italian press this morning ignored French Premier Reynaud's friendly overtures in his speech to the Senate foreign affairs committee yesterday. All newspapers bury the item on their back pages and nearly all of them leave out the references to Italy. Friendly remarks made in England at the same time by Hugh Dalton, Laborite, are not mentioned in any Italian newspaper.

It is possible, however, that there will be some comment in tomorrow's newspapers, but in any event the Italian public as a whole is not even going to know that the French are willing to bury the hatchet.

The fact that Ansaldo stood by his guns today shows that the government is willing to let the army have its warning.

Ansaldo, who is close to Foreign Minister Ciano, and editor of the Ciano family newspaper, Il Telegrafo of Leghorn, started out by saying that his speech last week had "made a vast echo in the world." Then he said again: "We are ready from one moment to another and from one hour to another."

Woe to the Vanquished

"The present war is a terrible one, into which entire peoples are throwing all their strength and all their resources because they well know that those who are backward can have no delusions as to their fate," Ansaldo continued. "They will be impoverished and the victors will monopolize all the world's resources. There is nothing which can make the victors act differently.

"Only if Italy is really strong will she be among the victors and only in that way will Italian workers be able to attain the condition of well-being they desire. All your hopes lie in the arms you carry."

Ansaldo expressed these sentiments in this morning's Telegrafo.

Other newspapers, like the Popolo di Roma, write that "arms are ready, just as spirits are" if the Duce should make the supreme call.

French to Be at Fair

Paris, April 21 (AP).—The French government, seeking Italian friendship, appointed an important delegation today to the Milan Fair.

A Commerce Ministry communique said Leon Barety, a deputy and president of the French expositions committee, was named chairman of the delegation.

This action reflected the policy of seeking a Mediterranean entente, outlined yesterday by Premier Reynaud to the Senate foreign affairs committee.

Funeral Set Today For Capt. Wright

Funeral services for Capt. Nathaniel H. Wright, 57, U. S. N. retired, of the Bureau of Engineering, will be at 10:30 a. m. today at Fort Myer Chapel. Burial will be in Arlington Cemetery.

Capt. Wright died Friday in U. S. Naval Hospital. He retired two years ago. Since that time he had been confined to the hospital.

Surviving are a brother, George Ewing, of Racine, Wis., and a sister, Mrs. W. R. F. Wallace, of Phoenix, Ariz.

Funeral Today For L. H. Meyers, Real Estate Man

The funeral of Louis Henry Meyers, 81, thirty-second degree Mason and former real estate man, will be held at 2 p. m. today from his residence, 6255 Utah avenue northwest. Burial will be in Rock Creek cemetery.

Mr. Meyers died Saturday at his home. A native of Nazareth, Penn., he came here in his youth.

With Victor Anderson he formed the real estate firm of Meyers & Anderson. Subsequently, he was business manager of the firm of Stone & Fairfax.

He was past commander of Columbia Commandery, No. 2, high priest of Lafayette Chapter, and past potentate of Almas Temple.

He leaves a son, Dr. Victor Meyers, of Arlington, Va.; two daughters, Miss Irene Belle Meyers, of Washington, and Mrs. Florence M. Lewis, of Kingsport, Tenn.; a brother, Benjamin F. Meyers; and a sister, Miss Emma F. Meyers, of Washington.

Raymond Riordon, Developer of D. C. Night Schools, Dies

Raymond Riordon, educator who developed District night schools and municipal playgrounds, died yesterday at Highland, N. Y., the Associated Press reported. He was 62.

A native of Washington, he was the son of John Brown and Elizabeth R. Riordon. He was educated at Eastern High School here where he was a prominent athlete. For many years connected with the public school system here, he was at one time the principal of the Greenleaf School.

Surviving are two brothers, J. Allen Riordon, general manager of the Norfolk & Washington Steamboat Co., and Charles Riordon, patent attorney, also of Washington.

Funeral services will be at Highland tomorrow. Burial will be here Wednesday.

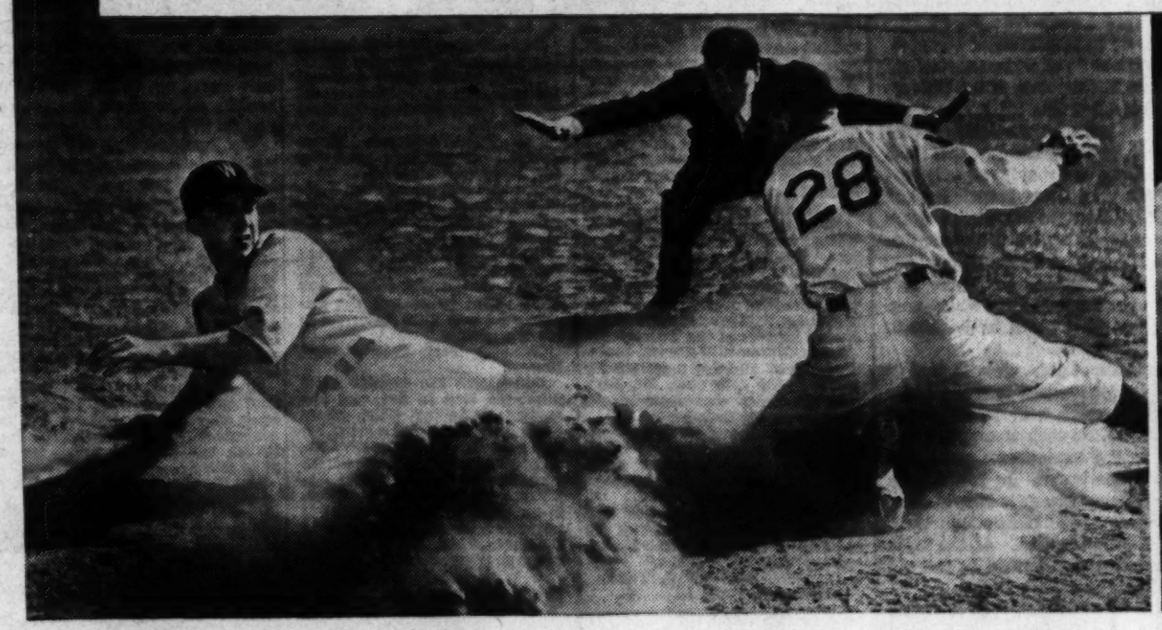
"FASTEST BASE-RUNNER IN BASEBALL"—



SPEED COUNTS IN BASE-RUNNING—BUT IN A CIGARETTE IT'S SLOW BURNING THAT COUNTS WITH ME. SLOWER-BURNING CAMELS GIVE ME THE BIG 'EXTRAS' IN SMOKING PLEASURE—AND EXTRA SMOKING, TOO

YOU SEE THE FLASH OF SPIKES, the white blur of the ball whipping across the diamond, a cloud of dust—and you hold your breath. But he's safe at second by a split second! Yes, it's another stolen base for George Case. He stole 51 bases last season...led the major leagues...won wide acclaim as the "fastest man in baseball." It makes your legs ache to watch him, he runs so hard...so fast. But when George lights up a cigarette, speed is out. "No fast burning for me," he says. "I always smoke the slower-burning brand...Camel. Camels give me several big extras in smoking."

OFF THE DIAMOND, George Case (above, right) prefers a slower pace...he likes to fish...smokes Camels a lot. He says: "Slower-burning Camels are more than mild—they're extra mild and extra cool. The more I smoke Camels, the more I like their full, rich flavor." Yes, the more you smoke Camels, the more you'll appreciate their extra mildness, extra coolness, and extra flavor.

SMOKES THE SLOWER-BURNING CIGARETTE—CAMEL

GEORGE CASE, Joe DiMaggio, "Bucky" Walters, Johnny Mize...so many top-flighters in America's favorite sport prefer America's favorite cigarette...Camel.

George Case tells his experiences above. Let your own experience convince you how much more pleasure there is in smoking when your cigarette is slower-burning...made from costlier tobaccos. Smoke Camels. Enjoy the extra mildness, extra coolness, and extra flavor that only Camel's matchless blend of costlier tobaccos and slower way of burning can give. Get more pleasure per puff and more puffs per pack (see right).

In recent laboratory tests, CAMELS burned 25% slower than the average of the 15 other of the largest-selling brands tested—slower than any of them. That means, on the average, a smoking plus equal to

The Fire Menace

The special committee appointed to investigate the causes of the O street fire and to make recommendations designed to prevent a recurrence of such tragedies has completed its labors with praiseworthy promptitude. Sweeping reforms in laws concerning fire escapes are suggested as well as more expeditious publication of building codes and regulations. This is only a preliminary program, as the committee recommends continuance of current code studies by special committees.

The fire hazards which Washington residents have most to fear, however, will not be removed merely by changes in protective legislation, desirable though they may be. The O street fire brought death and injury to several persons, not only because of defective laws but also because of failure to enforce the building code. The work of enforcement is of primary importance, as the investigating committee realizes. Therefore, it requests a special appropriation to bring the inspection service up to date. Additional funds are also needed to enlarge the permanent inspection staff and keep its work current.

Not only must inspection be thorough, but steps must be taken to assure compliance with safety requirements by owners of buildings. In addition to the scandalous inadequacy of the inspection service, the District has failed to put sufficient pressure upon known violators of the building codes to force compliance. The limited fines imposed here may be paid cheerfully while the owner continues to save money by ignoring the requirements of the law. If fines for noncompliance were cumulative, with each day of delay adding to the penalty, as is the case in many cities, violation of building codes would soon cease to be profitable.

In its failure to give the people of Washington reasonable protection against the danger of fire the District Government has run true to form. Its shortcomings in this as in other fields are attributable primarily to an insufficiency of funds which, in turn, results in putting impossibly heavy tasks upon an inadequate personnel. The basic cause of poor performance, of course, is traceable to the lack of a genuine local government awake to the community's needs and eager to satisfy them.

Challenge To Mr. Dewey

One point stands out in the thoroughly political speech by President Roosevelt to the Young Democrats of America at Warm Springs on Saturday night. He emphatically denounced the complete isolationist position attributed to a Republican aspirant for the Presidency, and by implication reaffirmed his belief that the United States must play its part as a great world power.

Presumably the President's remark was aimed at Thomas E. Dewey. In his Wisconsin campaign Mr. Dewey assumed many of the trappings of the complete isolationist. Being eager to center the Presidential campaign on domestic issues, he took a very unrealistic view of American interests and responsibilities beyond our own borders. That attitude has not enhanced Mr. Dewey's stature as a candidate for the most important position in the gift of the American people.

It appears, however, that there is something of a gap between the line of reasoning Mr. Dewey followed in Wisconsin and that attributed to an unnamed "Republican aspirant" by the President. Mr. Roosevelt spoke of a candidate "who tells you, in effect, that the United States and the people of the United States should do nothing to try to bring about a better order, a more secure order, of world peace when the time comes." Mr. Dewey's argument at Milwaukee was that the greatest contribution we can make to world peace is to bring about domestic recovery.

In this same address Mr. Dewey said: "And yet we know we cannot possibly remain strong and free unless we reject every entanglement in the affairs of Europe." That statement is a keen disappointment to many who had hoped that all the Presidential candidates this year would recognize the inevitability of American participation in world affairs. But it stops short of saying that the United States should do nothing to bring about a better order of world peace.

Whether or not the President has distorted the position actually taken by Mr. Dewey, he has given the New York district attorney a good opportunity to state his position regarding American foreign policy in unmistakable terms. It is to be hoped that he will take advantage of this opportunity after the most careful deliberation on the position the United States now occupies in the family of nations.

Investment Trust Curbs

A subcommittee of the Senate Committee on Banking and Currency is now holding hearings on a bill for the regulation of investment trusts. The measure is the outgrowth of a study which the SEC was directed to make under a provision of the holding company act of 1935. Thus the regulatory plan is the result of intensive preliminary investigation.

In testifying before the Senate committee, Commissioner Healy of the SEC aptly described investment trusts and investment companies as "large liquid pools of the public's savings entrusted to managements to be invested."

The stake which the public has in these organizations is immense, the value of all their assets being over $4,000,000,000. Moreover, it is estimated that about 2,000,000 persons own the securities which these trusts issue against the diversified holdings in which funds are invested. Thus, from the viewpoint of the individual investor as well as that of industry which benefits from the investment of capital, it is most important to prevent tampering with the funds controlled by investment trusts.

There is no doubt that the reputable managements of investment trusts are entirely sincere when they say they would welcome regulation. For the great majority of honestly managed enterprises have been seriously injured by the abuses perpetrated by a few slipshod undertakings that have betrayed the confidence reposed in them.

The chief question at issue is not, therefore, whether to regulate, but how far regulation ought to go in order to extirpate abuses. It appears to be generally agreed that a regulatory law should provide for full and searching publicity.

Registration provisions, prohibitions against any substantial change of investment policy without stockholder approval, regular statements covering the operations of the trusts, and insistence upon approved accounting practices are admittedly desirable.

But analysis of the bill discloses intention to arm the SEC with powers of control over management that go far beyond such objectives.

Since the bill under consideration is over 100 pages long, and highly technical, only an expert point by point analysis would enable one to understand the reason for the strong opposition that has developed. However, the main objections are to the very broad grants of power which would permit the SEC to regulate the makeup of boards of directors, their relations with other companies, and with brokers, underwriters and financial institutions.

The type of capital structure hereafter permitted would also be determined by law and the size of the companies legally limited. As one critic puts it, the bill likewise would "so limit the availability of qualified men for direction of investment funds as seriously to depreciate the caliber of management in future."

The broad discretionary powers conferred upon the SEC may be due to some extent to hasty drafting of the measure. But there are so many features therein which would impose restrictions upon managerial functions that it is invidious to single out one or two for special mention.

The testimony to date strongly indicates that in its zeal to suppress wrongdoing, the SEC has drafted a regulatory measure permitting it to usurp functions that properly belong to management—functions which no regulatory agency is qualified to discharge.

Philippine Immigration

The request of the Japanese government through Ambassador Horinouchi that the United States use its influence to prevent a sharp curtailment of Japanese immigration into the Philippine Islands places this Government on the horns of a dilemma.

According to Mr. Horinouchi, an average of 2,800 Japanese have annually taken up residence in the Philippines during the recent years. A measure now awaiting final passage by the Assembly of the Commonwealth would limit to 500 the number of immigrants from any country in a year. Japan has reason for concern. Nor is the request made by her to the United States out of order for, under the Tydings-McDuffie Act, the President of the United States has veto power with regard to any Philippine legislation involving immigration.

This fact places a serious responsibility on the Chief Executive. Relations between this country and Japan are and for some time have been anything but happy. There is, generally speaking, much to be said against any course of action that would unnecessarily subject these relations to further strain or give the island empire any excuse further to flout American interests and desires. Yet it would be invidious for President Roosevelt to prevent the Philippine Commonwealth from putting into effect such a measure as that now being considered at Manila.

The United States itself has long pursued a policy of immigration restriction and thus has set an example which the Commonwealth has every right to follow. Furthermore, the proposed Philippine immigration measure is non-discriminatory, since it applies equally to all countries. Our own law is grossly discriminatory so far as the Japanese are concerned.

Facing independence, the people and government of the Philippines have an imperious reason to set their house in order. Ambassador Horinouchi is probably correct in saying that "Japanese have been contributing to the economic development of the Philippines." But in view of what has happened in Manchuria and what recently happened in Norway, the Filipinos can be excused for wondering whether the price of the Japanese contribution may not, in the long run, prove extremely high.

To be sure, as long as the islands remain under protection of the American flag and fleet the possibility of Trojan Horse tactics by the Japanese in the Philippines might be discounted. But after 1946 the presence there of a large and growing number of subjects of the Mikado would have obvious dangers. The United States, which in six years will wash its hands of the islands, can hardly object if the Manila legislature proposes to reserve the Philippines for the Filipinos.

Where Science Fails

Scientists and scholars engaged in an interesting flurry of argument over the future of American civilization at the meeting of the American Philosophical Society in Philadelphia which closed Saturday. In effect, science was put on the defensive. Spokesmen for the physical sciences were asked rather pointedly who is responsible for the "long list of evils" resulting from technology and other achievements of this mechanized age.

The debate brought forth some profoundly pessimistic views. Dr. Alfred V. Kidder, of the Carnegie Institution of Washington, fears that "our present order is due for a terrific smash and that the next advance will be made by races other than those of Western Europe and the United States." That gloomy forecast seems to be based upon his belief that our mechanistic civilization is extremely vulnerable to the "monkey wrenches of war, or pestilence, or crop failures."

Considering the advance of medical science and the improving technique of agriculture, pestilence and crop failure are not by themselves a cause for present alarm. It is only when they are viewed as the possible concomitant of devastating wars that their frightful possibilities become apparent. And this is only another way of saying that the real menace to civilization is modern warfare.

There are lesser dangers, of course, such as the failure of men and nations to solve their social and economic problems. But this difficulty, too, is closely associated with war. Indeed, Dr. Kidder believes that the single underlying cause of the world's worst trouble is man's failure to cope with his own cultural mechanism. This seems equivalent to saying that we are threatened with disaster because we do not understand ourselves and our relations to other human beings.

Dr. Arthur H. Compton, of the University of Chicago, made a spirited defense of science. "Most of our creative thinking," he said, is being done in this field. Through science we may gradually approach a "new plateau of knowledge and invention." "Then we may hope again to refine our mode of living," he continued, "to fit precisely the conditions of our greater world." In any event, he sees science as a tremendous force which may be expected to give world leadership to those who employ it.

The weakness of this view is that it seems to take for granted that the fruits of scientific research will be constructively employed. No such assumption can be made, as the exploding bombs and mines in Europe prove. In addition to giving men greater power to supply their wants, science has multiplied their powers of self-destruction. At the same time it has contributed little to the art of peaceful human relationships.

It seems to be a redirection of scientific achievement that is needed. The weak point in the equation of civilization is the relationship of man to man and nation to nation. Possibly science does not have much to offer in this field. But if that proves to be the case, other forces will have to be relied upon to save western civilization from the catastrophe toward which it appears to be moving.

The reason why Uncle Sam has such long legs is because they've been pulled so often.

The difference between "dam" and "damn" is that the former retains pressure; the latter relieves it.

The Shape of Things to Come

From the Chicago Daily News

The spring fashion news from Paris strikes a disquieting note that should serve warning to males intent upon preserving their blessed celibacy, come hell and leap year. The females of the species, it would appear, have gone to the Lorelei for inspiration for the spring silhouette and to the Royal Northwest Mounted Police for tactics. This combination, coupled with leap year, forebodes subjugation and chains for millions.

The new feminine silhouette is described as that of a mermaid without a tail. "It has a rounded high bustline. Over the ribs it is fitted like the paper on the wall, and this continues down to the knees . . . Skirts, if anything, are shorter."

We can hardly wait!

Transportation Survey

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The Post of April 14 contained a story that was incomplete and as a result was highly misleading. It covered the report of Chairman Joseph B. Eastman of the Interstate Commerce Commission who, as Federal coordinator of transportation in 1933-36, began a comprehensive survey of public aid to the various types of transportation. The survey stemmed, of course, from the Government's program of assisting the railroads in their fight to weather the depression years.

In the body of the story, and without elaboration, there was listed a "public aid to highway users" of $31,000,000,000. That much actually was spent for construction and maintenance of roads and urban streets from 1921 through 1937.

But Mr. Eastman's report shows further that the users of those facilities—the passenger cars, buses and trucks—not only "paid their way" but poured an excess of approximately $500,000,000 into the public coffers in the 17-year period solely from motor-vehicle tax revenues.

It is interesting to note that the survey excluded all receipts from Federal excise taxes on gasoline, oil and motor vehicles, as well as portions of the States' tax receipts which were diverted to general uses. Thus, we see the Nation's motorists paid many millions above what Mr. Eastman found to be their "fair share" of highway costs and, in addition, paid substantial amounts toward support of the Federal and State Governments' general functions. Even allowing a margin for errors in the data used, Mr. Eastman concludes that motorists at least are paying their way.

The great importance of that conclusion lies in the fact that it refutes the railroads' persistent claim that they are hampered by publicly supported competitors. On this point, Mr. Eastman said the railroads' contentions "impress me as being carried to extreme limits" and are "patently unsound."

On Primaries

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: By way of background as to primary elections:

Around 1910, there was agitation for the passage of State primary laws, some since repealed regularly and two more optionally.

In no case where there was a real race for the Republican nomination have the results of primaries been a determining factor.

1912—Theodore Roosevelt won in all but three of the States where primaries were held. Taft was nominated.

1916—Hughes was not running but was drafted from the bench. Primary results were scattered between several candidates including Henry Ford and the elder La Follette.

1920—Wood, Lowden, and Hiram Johnson struggled in primaries and killed each other off.

1924—No real race against Coolidge. La Follette, with a few delegates from primaries, split off in his third party movement.

1928—While primary votes were scattered among Lowden, Curtis, Watson, and Norris, Hoover won on the first ballot and the primaries he won were incidental to his nomination.

1932—No real race against Hoover.

1936—Borah ran in nine State primaries, won in five, and lost in four, including Ohio, where Robert A. Taft carried most of the delegation by a heavy vote. Landon ran in only three primaries, winning over Borah in New Jersey and winning through a write-in campaign in Massachusetts but losing to an uninstructed slate in California. But Borah got nowhere in the convention.

Foreign Policy

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: If a German victory appeared so certain that American troops seemed indispensable to an Allied victory, would President Roosevelt personally favor sending American youth across the Atlantic to rescue the Allies? The President's unfaltering devotion to the Allies for the last two years constitutes an affirmative answer to this momentous question.

A peace policy based on the fallacy of "taking steps short of war" is war in disguise. Yes, the dynamic personality in the White House has sold to millions of dupes a militant war policy sealed in a peace package. These dupes are giving the ablest warmonger of the world credit for keeping America out of war; when, as a matter of fact, we have stayed out of this war so far in spite of Roosevelt, and not on account of him.

The President can see German submarines in every spring branch, but he never fails to apologize tactfully for flagrant violations of international law by British-French imperialists. England and France are not satisfied with our condescension to sell them the latest designed American planes; to permit censorship and seizure of our mails and coercion of our merchant vessels into danger zones for searching; but we must now consent to the rationing of neutrals.

In other words, we must sell England and France what they want when they want it, but can sell to neutrals only such quantities as our British and French masters suffer us to sell.

In a few months from now we will be cheerfully donating thousands of planes to the Allies under the camouflage of a technical loan. An army of snoopers will soon infest this Nation for the dastardly purpose of crushing all antiwar sentiment.

The President might be sincere in his foreign policy, but at best he is a sincere sucker for the Allies. Every American boy of military age should take his stand for America by refusing to leave American soil. Hoover soup lines are preferable to Roosevelt guns.

Labor Board

To the Edtior of The Post—Sir: The necessity for the reconsideration and reformation of the law instituting the Labor Board as now written and administered should be self-evident. President Madison, one of the stronger and clearer minds of the makers of this Government, declared: "The accumulation of full powers, legislative, executive and judicial in the same hands, whether of one, a few or many, or whether hereditary, self-appointive or elective, may justly be pronounced the very definition of tyranny."

This great principle of constitutional law, the foundation of a democratic government, is violated in the Labor Board law, and its violation is magnified in this present Administration. The writer has from the beginning been in favor of maintaining the rights and liberties of labor, its fair treatment, its right to strike, but at the same time has always had the regard for the laws of our country which all classes equally should honor and obey.

The present Labor Board makes rules and regulations with penalties, administers its own laws, and judges regarding its laws. No wonder many, even those not knowing what Madison has said, but born and bred in democracy, are shocked at such an anomaly. Democracy would call it a monstrosity.

Puerto Rico, Debts And Credits

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Several of my friends have spent considerable time studying the problems of Puerto Rico, particularly those of soil erosion, agricultural production and related factors. Their opinons seem to be that this country has a most difficult problem with a net average increase in population of 40,000 and little prospect of such population ever securing an adequate standard of life from the meager natural resources of the island.

In considering this problem a discussion has been raised of emigration of the population. The unanimous opinion is that on account of the mixture of blood, we do not want these people to intensify the racial minorities issue in the United States proper.

It has occurred to me that it might be possible to combine the needs of England and France for credit in the United States with the need of this country for adequate land for the surplus population of Puerto Rico, the needs of our Navy for defense purposes, and the desire of all nations of North and South America to terminate the hold which England and France have on the continent itself, into one plan which would possibly meet the situation.

French and British Guiana and British Honduras are not highly prized by England and France either from a financial standpoint or as possible locations for surplus population from their possessions. It is my understanding that these areas would serve most adequately for the steadily increasing surplus population of Puerto Rico, especially since such a large part of the crops to be grown in these areas would be the same as those now being grown in Puerto Rico. Most parts of these English and French possessions are thinly populated, while Puerto Rico has less than one-half acre of arable land per person.

The thought is that in return for France and England giving up these areas or parts of them, and giving us certain naval bases in the Bahamas, the United States could cancel the debts of the previous war, which we have very little chance of collecting anyway, and give these countries a certain amount of credit in this country.

The termination of the previous war debt would of course allow France and England to borrow from private sources in this country as governments, and this would greatly help in financing the war. It would certainly be worth a lot to this country to get the Puerto Rico problem settled with adequate areas to take care of the surplus population.

Some guarantee as to the setting-up of British Honduras, or such parts of Guiana as are ceded to this country, as free and independent states, as we have done in the cases of Cuba and the Philippine Islands, would, it is hoped, counterbalance any fear of the South and Central American countries that we were expanding into their territory. Perhaps any areas ceded by England and France on the continent could be put under a joint protectorate of the United States and of the South and Central American countries and Mexico, so as to avoid the suspicion of imperialist expansion by this country. This should help our standing with these countries.

With the Allies provided with adequate financing for several years of continued war, Germany may be more inclined to agree to reasonable peace terms.

The Post Impressionist

Power Of The Press

Roger Wheeler had been county editor of the Brockville Times for 15 years, and during that period I believe he was (a) a misogynist, and (b) a potential writer of "the great American novel."

We of the Times sports department looked down on Roger and his coterie of rural correspondents whose hackneyed accounts of Ladies' Auxiliary cake sales and rummages, whose homely personal squibs and long winded narratives of social trivia cluttered the columns of the "suburban pages" in an otherwise progressive newspaper.

One morning I hit the office early, planning to have extra sports-page forms locked up ahead of schedule. The editorial sanctum was deserted—except for Roger, who had arrived a few minutes earlier and was busy grinding his pencils preparatory to a siege of comma-marking and "lower-casing."

"Hi, there!" he remarked. And as I started for the sports cubicle, a phone rang. Roger dropped his pencils.

"Brockville Times—good morning!" he said, mechanically. And then the bombshell burst.

"What's that?" said Roger in a high-pitched, excited voice. "Now, Madam! Don't do that! Don't do it, I beg of you!"

I stopped dead. What was this? As Roger hissed in an aside:

"Stand by, Reg! Just a minute!" Then he reverted to the phone.

"Madam, what is your name and where do you live?" He snatched at a pencil and squiggled rapidly on a sheet of copy paper. "All right, Madam," he said. "Yes—we'll put it on the front page. Thank you!" He slammed the receiver on the hook.

"Quick, brother!" he yelled. "Grab your hat! Come along!" and leaped for the door.

"Hey—what——"

"Dont' stop to ask!" said Roger, frantically. "Come along! Woman'll gonna commit suicide!"

That was enough, even for a blase sports writer. Two streamlined noses-for-news plowed through the outer exit. We sprang into the car, the motor roared. We skidded 'round the corner. Of such stuff are newspapermen—yea, even county and sports editors—made!

It was a cosy little bungalow. Perhaps there were rambler roses and clinging vines—we didn't have time to look. Squealing brakes brought us to a stop. We galloped up the porch steps. Roger yanked at the doorknob, and we piled in pell-mell. There was a tidy little living-room. No one here. Dining room ditto. Thence through a swinging door to the kitchen.

Here it was we found the motif for all the excitement. She sat there in the breakfast nook—a little blonde woman in morning negligee. Her face was tear-streaked. In one hand she clutched a dainty little hankie. As we barged in behind the swinging door she turned to us and shrieked:

"Don't come in! Don't! I've turned on the gas! Go 'way! Leave me alone! I'm going to die!"

Two streamlined noses-for-news sniffed—and sniffed in vain. Roger leaped for the gas stove—found one jet open—and promptly shut it down.

I nonchalantly lit a cigarette and waited for developments. Was this going to be another of Recherche Roger's outrageous funny stalemates? What was a sports writer doing on such a fool errand, anyhow?

Rogers cast a stony gaze at the little blond woman, who sniffed, sobbed and wiped away several unfurtive tears.

"Madam," he said loftily, "What is the meaning of all this?"

"None of your business!" she said, indignantly.

"But you made it our business," said Roger. "You called the Times and said you were going to commit suicide."

At the mention of the Times, the woman turned an eager face upward.

"Oh—you are from the Times?" she trilled. "I thought you were just a snoopy——"

"Now, madam," Roger broke in with authority. "I want you to begin at the beginning. What started this?"

"It's—it's—Henry!" said the woman, and the sobs became audible again.

"I take it Henry is your husband?" Roger queried as he reached for pencil and copy pad.

"Yes—my husband."

"And what's wrong with Henry?"

"Well, there's nothing really wrong with him. I don't think he's crazy. He's just—oh, I think he's just—short-tempered. But——" and now the sobs were very audible and the tears started falling—"he's really breaking my heart! He was perfectly awful at breakfast this morning and we—we had a dreadful quarrel. And he said—oh, boo-boo-hoo—the most terrible things—and left without kissing me good-by!" There was a lachrymosal deluge and we waited. "So," the tearful blonde dabbed at her eyes and brought her sobs under control. "I thought I would telephone the Times."

"What has the Times got to do with your quarrels?" I interposed, to cut things short.

"Why—I thought if the Times would print a piece on the front page about my planning to commit suicide, and Henry read it on his way home from work this afternoon, it would—would make him realize——" she stopped, at a loss for words.

Silently, stealthily, I stole through the swinging door and into the outer air, leaving Roger to attend to the post-prandials.

Now, I would like to end with the announcement that the Times printed the story. Henry read it on his homeward journey, and a newlywed couple were reconciled, with Roger acting as the grand fixer-upper.

But no! A year later Henry and his spouse were divorced.

Two years later—Roger married the blonde.

He is no longer a misogynist. And the great American novel is still unwritten. WALTER REGAN.

Mr. Hull Declines

By Ernest K. Lindley

Will The Office Seek The Man?

AGAIN, MORE emphatically this time, Secretary Hull has declared that he is not in any sense a candidate for any political office.

Did he mean that he would not accept the Presidential nomination? He did not say so. He did not insinuate so. He merely rebuffed once more the effort of admirers to stimulate a boom in his behalf.

There are obvious reasons why Mr. Hull would not wish to be regarded as an active candidate for the Presidential nomination.

The first is that he is Secretary of State in a time of international crisis. If he were to become an active candidate or to permit his friends to make an active campaign in his behalf, his words and actions would invite political sharp-shooting. He would open himself to the charge that he was acting and talking to further his ambitions. He would run the risk of having his pronouncements accepted at a discount. He would run this risk, both at home and abroad, no matter how conscientiously his decisions were made with a view solely to protecting our national interest.

A SECOND REASON is that Mr. Roosevelt has not renounced a third term. Other members of his Administration, it is true, have managed to promote their own candidacies without running afoul the third-term movement. They have become "conditional candidates." They are candidates only if the President does not accept a third nomination. Jim Farley has gone a step farther. He has declared that his name will go before the convention, no matter what any other candidate does. Vice President Garner has gone clear overboard. About the only question left concerning his candidacy is whether or not he will have his own Texas delegation for more than a perfunctory first-ballot vote.

Even if Mr. Hull were in his heart avidly ambitious to be President it would be politically unnecessary for him to go about corralling delegates. For working in his behalf he has had the President, James A. Farley and many lesser leaders. The President has said repeatedly in recent months that Hull seems to him to be the most practicable choice. Jim Farley started out to boom Hull more than a year ago. Nominally Farley is a candidate for President. But the Farley campaign is really a campaign for Hull, for Jim has made no secret his belief that a Hull-Farley ticket would be the strongest that could be chosen.

The "situation" also favors Hull. He is a kind of bridge between the Roosevelt Administration and the conservative regular Democrats. Not only to Farley, but to many others, he seemed the logical nominee even before the European war broke out. He is the only Democrat except the President who can be said to be especially fitted by experience to guide the destinies of the Nation during a period in which foreign policy is of prime importance.

IF HULL were lying awake nights thinking how to grab the nomination, he could not contrive a better plan, for him, than the one he is following. It happens to be also the plan for a man who is not especially eager to be President. Many of his close friends believe that his present attitude is inspired by a measure of real indifference rather than by shrewd political calculation.

He would like to have the honor, presumably. But he is not a fervent self-promoter. And there are real reasons why he might shrink from the Presidential nomination. One is his age. He is 68, and will be 69 before election day. He is well-preserved for his years, capable of performing a long, hard day's work. But he is reaching the age where most men feel that they should lighten their burdens. The Secretaryship of State carries heavy mental and nervous strains, but it is a small job compared to the Presidency. Hull works slowly and has all the earmarks of a poor administrator.

Three years ago the President and his loyal aides set 70 as the maximum age for useful service on the Federal courts. This arbitrary limit was obviously undesirable. Some of our greatest jurists have reached their prime on the far side of 70. But sitting on the bench, even the Supreme bench, is light, sedentary work compared to the Presidency.

MRS. HULL has told friends emphatically that she is inflexibly opposed to her husband's accepting the Presidential nomination if it is offered to him. Her avowed aim is to get him out of public office next January so that he can enjoy his remaining years.

The honor of the nomination is, however, too great to be turned down by any man who is not in such bad health that the strain of the office would almost certainly be fatal. In 1924 Gov. Samuel Ralston of Indiana probably would have had the Democratic nomination—although he almost certainly would not have been elected. Knowing that he was mortally ill, he forbade Tom Taggart, leader of the Hoosier delegation, to put him forward as a compromise candidate.

The Secretary of State is organically sound. For his age, he seems exceptionally fit. There may be other personal reasons why he does not hanker for the nomination. But he would be a remarkable man if, despite his advancing years, he should decline the nomination to the highest office in the land, and the most influential position in the world.

Miami—What's Wrong?

MY VALUED CLIENT, the Miami Herald, has haled me before the bar of local opinion for discovering, year after year, that the criminal scum of Northern cities move into that community and ply their various nefarious trades. I am accused of failing to perceive the beauties of well-behaved Americans, who outnumber the truly bad a thousand to one.

In reply, may I say that I have often attempted to describe the richness of the scene and to give proper recognition to those daring doers who created on that risky strip between the glades and the mangrove tangles of the beach a pleasure land without a rival, in certain respects, anywhere on earth. Miami has now become a real city and an important port for travel and commerce by air and sea, and appreciation of that fact suggests to me that the two daily newspapers, the Herald and the Daily News, owned by Jimmy Cox, thrice Governor of Ohio and once the Democratic nominee for President, have not grown with the town.

THERE IS nothing wrong with the Miamis as to crime, civic corruption and official negligence or connivance that could not be cured by these two papers, or either of them, if the disposition and the ability were there.

As to my own observations year after year, as far back as 1924, I will say that I have had almost a monopoly. There has been no lack of glamour copy, but I recall offhand no other reporter of so realistic, if cheerless, spirit as to observe that, amid the confusion of quick growth and ever more dazzling splendor, the community was developing an underworld as vicious as that of any of the older cities.

The management of both these papers agree that the race track known as Tropical Park, or the Hoodlums' Horse Yard, is a political perquisite of an element of criminals from Chicago and New York. They know who those criminals are and admit they defile everything they touch and never have contributed anything to the decent benefit of any city in which they have visited or operated. They are just no damned good, and their presence is a constant menace to the peace and morals of any place.

It has been said that the criminal scum of the North visit the Miamis only to relax. But the criminal's only holiday is a bushman's holiday. A low crime rate is meaningless in a town so crooked that even the children know which dives are privileged.

IN OLDEN times St. Paul and Toledo were King's-X towns in which crooks wanted elsewhere could sojourn and spend their stealings, immune from extradition, as long as they behaved themselves, but neither of the Miami papers would dare challenge local opinion by advocating such an arrangement there, and, anyway, it is well known that the criminals who go there find the local opportunities irresistible.

Frank Nitti, one of the most notorious gangsters in American history, is treated as a citizen and businessman, and the local prosecutor sees nothing awry in the fact that a brother-in-law of Al Capone and captain of the guard at Capone's fortified castle, is business agent of the Waiters and Bartenders Union. When a few witnesses failed to confirm the obvious connection between Nitti's beer and highball water and Capone's remote control of the union he whitewashed Capone's man.

But why should a witness risk his life telling all to that kind of prosecutor?

Books And Things

By Lewis Gannett

'T'is Of Thee

IF ANYTHING is evident in the flow of novels that pour through American presses today, it is that Americans are aware as never before of their land and their past ties to it. From Maine to Oregon, and from the wilderness of northernmost Minnesota to the hammocks of Florida, the boys and girls are writing with passion and pride of the soil whence they sprang, of the men and women who fought to tame it and make it ours. Never before, I think, did that sense of possession exist on such a continental scale.

A PART OF IT is homesickness. The past has always a security which no present can ever command. We know its boundaries; we have seen its goal. Men seem to have been stronger and surer of themselves when we, in our wisdom of their future, know which of their dreams were to be realized, and precisely where death was to punctuate their lives. The novelist who writes of mid-twentieth-century America takes the hard way, and is likely to fall. The historical novels are surer-footed.

The achievement of the novelists of this decade in restoring a usable past to the American consciousness is no mean one. Forget, for a moment, "The Grapes of Wrath," and "Native Son;" in general, the novels which affected the American imagination in the '30s, as "Main Street," "Winesburg," and Dreiser's massive volumes did in earlier decades, have been those which have, with varying degrees of literary merit and popular appeal, invaded not a living present but an almost forgotten past; Kenneth Robert's pageant of pre-Revolutionary New England, culminating in "Northwest Passage;" the seafaring Maine stories of Mary Ellen Chase, Tristram Coffin and Rachel Field; Walter Edmonds' recreations of the Mohawk Valley in precanal and canal days; Archie Binn's epics of the Far Northwest; Edna Ferber's series of panels of the continent; Margaret Mitchell's old Deep South and Elizabeth Madox Roberts' frontier Kentucky; Conrad Richter's hymns to grass in New Mexico, to forest in Ohio, and, in the previous decade, Rolvaag's and Willa Cather's stories of sod-house prairie days.

One could fill this column with the names of other novels that belong in such a list. They have fortified American pride; they keep a past real or romantic—alive for thousands who would never consciously read a history book. The "movies" have picked some of them up and passed the memory on to other millions, though sometimes with strange distortions; the Idaho and Utah backgrounds for the Hollywood versions of Colonial war on Lake Champlain and along the Mohawk were beautiful and woozy. But the relation of these stories to the living present is another matter.

It is that effort to the past to present which gives Paul Horgan's experiment, "Figures in a Landscape" (Harper, $2.50), a special interest. A "narrative tapestry" of life in the Southwest, its publishers call it. It is a series of stories of old and new New Mexico bound together by a series of running comments vaguely reminiscent of those obiter dicta by which John Steinbeck generalized his epic of one Okie family. But Horgan's interlocutory remarks bind space and time, race and soil.

"Against the land," he says, "stand three great themes: the Indians, the Spaniards and the American pioneers." One story, of Indian boys a century ago, might still be lived today. Another is of a period when the caravan route was still "Indian infested." In a third, a colonel from the old days sits wondering beside a modern "movie" theater, remembering a 40-year-old past in a frontier town which has become a part of a chain-store nation. In still another story, which subtly touches the deepest themes, a tourist surgeon and a nun stand off a gang of superstition-ridden peons and a crass white foreman, to operate on a dirty, half-dead Mexican. One tale, ironically laid in Billy the Kid's Lincoln County, sets a modern pretty-boy gangster in a ham-and-egg joint. Another is the saga of a too-pretty girl who passed from revivals through disgrace to apotheosis in celluloid.

It is an almost too-ambitious effort to link past and present against one magnificent landscape; it isn't quite successful as a whole. Yet several of the stories are works of art; some of the comment is memorable, and the method, echoing, as so many other experiments in form (like Dos Passos's) have done, the technique of the "movies," is itself a form of pioneering.

Notes On Turkey

Ankara, April 14.

AS I WRITE, the British and French envoys to all the Balkan states are at home plotting about Allied policy in the Balkans. Turkey waits to see what the results of their conference may be.

Here in Turkey they think that a very great increase of Allied pressure may precipitate a German move. They do not know what form the pressure may take. Certainly the Allies will continue to try to purchase the produce of the Balkans and so, by trade, prevent it from getting to Germany and feeding the German war machine.

The Allies have been almost wholly successful in accomplishing this as far as Turkey is concerned. They have given her large loans, which Turkey is liquidating by the delivery of raw materials. Things like spare parts for machinery Turkey is forced to buy from Germany, which furnished the machines in the first place, but reserves of these are being laid in.

Obviously, the Balkan countries would prefer to have foreign exchange, which all of them seriously need, rather than German mouthorgans and cameras with which they are well equipped. On the other hand, the German army is very near and very menacing and there is a limit to economic temptation. The Allies so far are waging a trade war against the threat of military occupation. There is a certain unreality about the whole atmosphere here. Germany repeatedly said that she has no intention to violate the neutrality of the Balkans and so have the Allies, but nobody here believes either statement.

TURKEY is extremely calm, precisely because she does not believe all the talk about neutrality. The Turks believe that this struggle will in all probability eventually involve all of Europe, and they have chosen their side. They would like to think that the war will not find Turkey but they do not wish to weaken themselves by any illusions. The actual treaty which they have with the British is purely defensive and there are all sort of loopholes in it. Turkey is not compelled to consent to open the Dardanelles to the British unless another European power commits an act of aggression against Turkey or against another European state whose independence has been guaranteed by the Allies or unless an act of aggression is committed in the Mediterranean area which would lead to war involving the Allies.

This would seem to mean that Turkey would go with Great Britain and France if the Italians carry the war into the Mediterranean or the Germans into Rumania. In the case of any act of aggression in the Balkans that Turkey or the Allies may consider to be a threat to either, Turkey and the Allies are merely obliged to consult. The treaty provides for action only in case the initiative is taken by Germany and Italy, and it specifically excludes Russia.

On the other hand, I have the distinct impression that the extent to which Turkey will lend collaboration to the Allies anywhere in the Balkans and under almost any circumstances will depend on Turkey's estimate of whether Britain and France are adequately prepared to carry through their strategy to success—whatever that strategy may be and however it may be initiated. Certainly no official of the government told me any such thing, but the general view taken here of the war, the belief in the absolute necessity of an Allied victory and the fact that there is no exaggerated illusion about the probability of not becoming involved—as a matter of fact, all unofficial people are convinced that the Dardanelles is the key position—can lead logically to only one conclusion. Therefore, what matters is not the letter of the treaty, but the Turkish estimate of Allied strength and Allied wisdom. The outcome in Scandinavia will be extremely important for its effect on opinion here.

THERE IS a general belief that the Allied army in Syria is not yet strong enough to justify the Allies in taking serious risks in this part of the world. Again, I am not quoting official sources, who, naturally, would not discuss a matter of this kind.

There is some apprehension, unofficially expressed, that public opinion in Britain and France may be pushing the Allies faster than they ought to go. The Turks with whom I have talked all believe that no matter what happens in individual engagements the British and French empires will win in the long run, if for no other reason than because the overwhelming majority of all the neutrals have the greatest interest in seeing them win. But the Turks are anxious that the Allies should win as quickly as possible and with as few setbacks as possible. They were allied with Germany in the last war, and they by no means underestimate the strength of the Germans.

Finally, neutral sources with whom I have spoken here speak well of the Turks as allies. Modern Turkey is not the corrupt center of a decayed Mahometan empire. It is a closely knit modern state. Despite the fact that the whole army—officially 600,000 men and unofficially estimated at many more—is on its feet, nothing whatever is rationed in Turkey. The only automobiles, and there seem to be a great many of them in Istanbul and Ankara, are American Fords, Plymouths and Chryslers, all of which use more gasoline than European cars, and there is no rationing of gas.

Turkey can get oil from Rumania and from Persia. Food is not rationed, and there is plenty of it in the country, particularly for a peasantry accustomed to simple fare.

Turkey has sufficient iron ore for her own use and an abundance of chromium, abrasives, manganese, magnesite, copper, antimony, cotton, wool, wheat, barley, oats, corn, flax, sheep cattle and oak lumber for export. While Germany is demanding that even children's trophies and ornaments of brass be delivered up to the government for melting, the Turkish bazaars are stocked with copper and bronze kitchen utensils for sale.

THIS IS A RICH and undeveloped country. The prime minister told me that were it properly developed it could support a population of 80,000,000 people; others think this is rather an optimistic figure, but agree that it could support 50,000,000 easily It actually has a population of 17,000,000 people, with the highest birth rate of any European or Near Eastern country, except Russia. It can, therefore, and to a large extent does, do for the Allies what Russia does for Germany.

The government finances are in order. Turkey has a balanced budget. There are no minority problems that can be exploited inside the country. Mustapha Kemal saw to that. And unless all reports that I have heard are incorrect, Turkey is united internally.

It is a primitive country, as its spokesmen, official and unofficial, are free to admit. "This fact has certain advantages," they say. "We are accustomed to war. We have been at war most of the time for centuries, and it is ironical that now we should be facing war again, when for the first time in centuries we are pursuing a thoroughgoing peace policy and have no quarrel with any of our neighbors on any frontier. But we are not immersed in ideas of middle-class comfort, and if and when we have to fight we shall not be disturbed by that fact."

Hueston Speaks On Anniversary Of Emancipation

Judge William C. Hueston, commissioner of education of the colored Elk fraternity, was the principal speaker yesterday at the celebration of the seventy-fifth anniversary of emancipation of slaves in the District of Columbia, held at Lincoln Temple, under auspices of the Acacia Grand Lodge of Masons and the Acacia Temple Builders' Association.

An emancipation program was furnished by the Warren and John F. Cook lodges in collaboration with the Datcher and Ruth Chapters of the Order of Eastern Star. The Emancipation Proclamation was read by Bertha C. Anderson.

Greetings were extended by Grand Master Louis Roy, Maurice W. Spencer, Bettie Miles, Sadie L. Strickland, and Vernetta Roberts. The history of Freemasonry among colored citizens of the District, beginning with Social Lodge in 1825, was read by Charles D. Freeman. Martin L. Jackson presided.

Radio And The War

"DO YOU FOLLOW the war news on the radio?" asked Mrs. Beezums.

"Yes, thanks to my husband's dandruff," replied Mrs. Woopsey.

"Dandruff?" questioned Mrs. Beezums, a little puzzled.

"Yes," replied Mrs. Woopsey. "George is troubled that way so he always tunes in on the hair tonic program which features three war experts just now."

"Is it a good program?"

"Good! Why, we get all the latest news of what's happened at Narvik right in between the talk on scalp massage and the chat on the importance of hair gloss in personal appearance. Don't you ever hear it?"

"No," replied Mrs. Beezums, "but we manage to follow the war pretty well."

"How?"

"Cigars, gasoline and chocolate bars," said Mrs. Beezums tersely. "The Clinker Five-Cent Stogie program has a wonderful analyst, who explains everything that happens. The Sweety Nut Bar Hour has a correspondent in Oslo."

"Oh, there's a couple of wonderful analysts on the Gazoopa Salad Oil Hour," declared Mrs. Woopsey. "Yesterday right between a fresh bombing of a British warship off Trondheim and a fight south of Bergen I got the loveliest recipe for a banana salad."

"Did you hear about those canned soup people?" demanded Mrs. Woopsey.

"No," replied Mrs. Beezums.

"It's gone and hired Dudley G. Botts, the famous war correspondent and author, to go over the whole war every evening at 8:15."

"That's nothing. There's a British rear admiral and a United States major of marines on the Skipsey-Ipsey Beer Hour. They're quite remarkable."

"I don't care for that beer," said Mrs. Woopsey.

"I just love war programs," said Mrs. Woopsey, "I mean if they have the right sponsors. Now, there's a war expert on the Zoopala Mustard program, but I just don't like mustard, so I'm not interested."

"Oh, listen," exclaimed Mrs. Beezums, rushing to her radio. "It's one of those watch company programs. There's always a wonderful summary of the whole European situation on any watch program. Aren't you going to listen?"

"No; I've got a watch," replied Mrs. Woopsey.

No Side Show

By Barnet Nover

Norway As Battlefield

IT IS AN extraordinarily revealing fact that instead of being only a side show the fighting in Norway overshadows all else that is taking place in the European conflict.

This may not prove to be the case indefinitely. The opening up of the Scandinavian salient may sooner or later be followed by the spread of the war to other areas—the Low Countries, for instance, or the Balkans or the Mediterranean—or even to a merging of the conflict in Europe with that raging in the Far East.

For the time being, however, Italy's participation in the war is limited to wholehearted moral support of her axis partner. And the Netherlands, Belgium, Rumania, Yugoslavia and the other small neutrals are, perhaps by grace of the developments taking place in Norway, permitted to enjoy for a while longer their very uneasy neutrality.

YET IT IS not alone because there is active fighting in Norway and none on the Western Front or elsewhere in Europe that the struggle in the North has captured the attention of the world. Nor can the present preoccupation with the Scandinavian battleground be explained solely on the basis of the undoubtedly great strategic factors which are involved in the fighting there. A great contributory reason why the struggle in Norway is far more than a sideshow is psychological.

This is true for the Allies as for Germany. The Allies have suffered a long succession of blows to their prestige. The process began years before the war but is now reaching a decisive stage. For what is involved in Norway touches the very source and center of their strength.

A defeat in Norway would be, whatever other considerations might be involved, a defeat of Allied sea power and would thus in all probability have a disintegrating effect on British and French relations with those powers who, like Italy, have been intimidated by that sea power into inaction or, like Turkey, have swung to the Allied side.

THUS FAR in the Norwegian struggle the Allies have made very good use of their naval superiority.

In the first place, the British fleet appears to have done considerable and, it may be, irrecoverable damage to the German fleet. Proof of this is to be found in the fact that Germany is being forced to rely very largely on air transports to provide reinforcements and supplies for the isolated units of her army of occupation.

This is as costly as it is a hazardous proceeding. Secondly, the fact that the German navy has been neutralized as a factor in the North Sea is demonstrated by the British admiralty's announcement that the landing of Allied troops on the Norwegian coast was achieved without the loss of a man. And, thirdly, the British were sufficiently confident of their superior naval power to risk major ships in a prolonged offshore bombardment of their Stavanger airfield last week.

BUT IF Allied sea power has proved equal to the preliminary task demanded of it, it is not yet certain that it will be the determining factor in the Norwegian struggle. The Allies must yet reckon with the still unproved factor of air power upon which Hitler obviously places his greatest reliance.

It was, according to Edmund Stevens, of the Christian Science Monitor, a military force sent by air that occupied Oslo. It is the air arm upon which the German high command now depends to build up an army of occupation in Norway so considerable as to make it impossible for the Allies to dislodge them. And through the use of this same instrument Germany expects to prevent the Allies from assembling in Norway a military force capable of driving out the invaders.

FOR BOTH sides, therefore, the fighting in Norway has crucial aspects. If, on the one hand, it proves that the Allied sea power is inadequate as against air power, the blow to British and French prestige would be a staggering one. If, on the other hand, the outcome proves that Germany has placed undue reliance on her air arm—to the point of sacrificing a good part of her fleet—then the impact on the morale of the Reich might be little short of disastrous.

The German people have long been indoctrinated with the belief that Germany has become invincible in the air. If that belief proves groundless not all the efforts of Dr. Goebbels and his propaganda machine will be able to prevent German morale from cracking. That is no doubt why the German press has been full of alleged successes scored by German fliers against British warships and transports. If such successes are actually scored later the future truth will obscure what may be present untruth. If, on the other hand, the German air arm does not live up to what the Germans have expected of it the disillusionment will be such that it will make no difference what was said earlier, anyway.

If Germany is to win, she must win in the air. If she cannot win by her air arm, she cannot win at all. For she has largely destroyed her sea power and there are reasons to believe that her military manpower is not adequate to the task of waging a successful offensive on several fronts.

Cromwell Announces He'll Have to Resign

Ottawa, April 21 (AP).—James H. R. Cromwell said tonight he would resign within the next month as United States Minister to Canada, a post to which he was appoinetd last January 4, to run for the Democratic nomination as Senator in New Jersey.

Cromwell said he "had to resign" in view of the statement of State Secretary Cordell Hull at Washington yesterday that he expected the minister would relinquish his post here to contest the primary May 21.

Keep Out of Campaign, Churches Are Urged

St. Louis, April 21 (AP).—An appeal to the churches to keep out of the forthcoming Presidential campaign was broadcast today by Dr. Walter A. Maier, theologian, in the last of a series of Nation-wide Lutheran Hour radio addresses.

"If the churches enter this campaign," the Concordia Seminary professor declared, "they will be enlisted for every political battle . . . and the influence of the gospel will be curtailed."

Luncheons, Breakfast Vary Party Routine

Mrs. Worthington and Mrs. Dewey Are Hostesses; Rep. and Mrs. Guyer Entertain at 9:30 A. M. for Whites

By Carolyn Bell

"If you want to see people in Washington you have to feed them," wisely remarked someone who certainly knew his way about the city.

The ever-popular dinner goes on unabated, but yesterday Sunday luncheons—and one 9:30 a. m. breakfast—accented the calendar. Mrs. Ralph Worthington gathered in a congenial group for luncheon yesterday as did Mrs. Ffoulke Dewey, who was feting out-of-town guests here for Mr. and Mrs. Snowden Fahnstock's dance Saturday night. Mrs. Frederick Gould was another who decided on a luncheon party yesterday.

While 9:30 o'clock is an unbelievable hour for a Washington party, nevertheless Representative and Mrs. U. S. Guyer entertained—and made their guests like it! The early hour was arranged so that the honor guests, Mr. and Mrs. William Allan White, could catch a train to New York. Guests invited to meet "the sage of Emporia" and his entertaining wife included Senator Arthur Capper, Senator and Mrs. Clyde M. Reed, Representative and Mrs. Edward H. Rees, Mrs. Edward E. Gann, Mr. and Mrs. William S. Culbertson, Mr. and Mrs. William A. Bailey—he is editor of the Kansas City Kansan—Charles Haslet and Clifford Straten. The party was given at the Mayflower Hotel.

Drive to Farm To Attend Party

Driving through the mean drizzle of yesterday' guests arived at Mrs. Worthington's home, River-Farm-on-the-Potomac, to find cheery log fires burning and a general atmosphere of gayety. Mrs. Worthington is entertaining at a series of these Sunday parties. Her farm, a charming place, was originally part of the Mount Vernon plantation.

Mrs. Worthington will leave today for Philadelphia, where she plans to visit her son-in-law and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. Norman Keith, who were married recently. From there she will travel to Cleveland, return on Saturday in time to go to Stratford, Va., for the week-end.

Among the guests at Mrs. Worthington's party were Senator Tom Connally, Senator Henrik Shipstead, Gen. John Phillip Hill, the Misses Mary and Elizabeth Howry, Mrs. A Mitchell Palmer, Mrs. Charles Lea, of Philadelphia; Mrs. Mason Gulick, Mrs. Effingham Townsend, Mrs. George Thorpe, Dr. and Mrs. Breckinridge Payne, the Secretary of the Legation of South Africa, Robert Webster; Edward Flathers, Edwand Van Devanter, Burton Robinson, of Iowa, and George Williams.

Closes Guests At Luncheon

Meanwhile, a pleasant group of people dropped in at the home of Mrs. Frederick Gould on McGill terrace for a bit of lunch. Mrs. Gould, who has been doing a good deal of entertaining since she leased a home here, will be hostess again on Thursday—this time at a dinner party.

The Minister of South Africa and Mrs. Ralph William Close were ranking guests at this party. Others there included Mr. and Mrs. Walter Tuckerman, Mr. and Mrs. Henry Grant Meem, Senator Capper, Dr. H. E. Van Enthoven, a Dutch professor who is visiting here; the Counselor of the Polish Embassy and Mme. Kwapiszewski, Mrs. W. L. Crounse and Mrs. L. H. Green.

Jeanne Richards' Betrothal Announced

Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Richards announce the engagement of their daughter, Jeanne de Beauvais Richards, to Robert Hughes Reeside, son of Mrs. Frank P. Reeside and the late Mr. Reeside.

The wedding will take place the last of May.

Pen Women Entertained At Reception

Highlights yesterday of the festivities preceding the opening of the biennial convention of the National League of American Pen Women were the president's reception, for which Mr. and Mrs. Eugene Meyer opened their home in the afternoon, and the buffet supper, art exhibit and program at the Grafton Hotel last night.

Audrey Wurdemann (Mrs. Joseph Auslander), retiring president of the league, received at the tea with Mrs. Meyer. She wore a floor-length gown, the skirt black and the blouse a flower print on a ground of white. Mrs. Meyer was in white.

Alternating at the tea table were Mrs. Inez Sheldon Tyler and Mrs. Victoria Faber Stevenson, former presidents of the local branch of the league; Mrs. Nellie Walker Irish, Miss Clara Mandorschied, Mrs. Matilde Kolb Bartlett, Mrs. Grace Dupree Ridings, of Texas; Tomas Cajigas, chairman of hospitality for the league; Mrs. Grace Seton Thompson, of Connecticut; Mrs. Claudia Rice Scott, Henrietta Randegger, of New York, and Pearl Homer, of Connecticut.

With Mrs. Cajigas were Mrs. Maria Daiz, delegate from Puerto Rico, who had just arrived, and Ana Alfonso, president of the Puerto Rico branch, both of whom are guests at her home.

Last night, following a buffet supper, of which Mrs. Philip Clancy was in charge, a program was presented at the Pen Women's studio. Mrs. Josephine Chandler Horner gave a poetry recital and there were songs by Stella Westenberger, accompanied by Stanley Bean; Dr. Robert P. Parsons, assistant director of the Corcoran Gallery of Art, gave an illustrated talk on paintings, and Violet B. Weaver discussed "Personalities I Have Painted." Florence A. Everhart, acting art chairman for the convention, presided.

Spencer Currys, Arthur Smiths Give Cocktails

Cocktail parties were in order yesterday. Mr. and Mrs. Spencer Curry entertained at a small affair at their home. Meanwhile, Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Clarendon Smith gathered in a large group of friends in honor of Mr. and Mrs. Christopher B. Garnett, at their home in Cleveland Park.

Spring flowers filled the home of Mr. and Mrs. Curry. Pink gladioli mingled with blue iris and yellow snapdragons. Low bowls of bright yellow jonquils added to the cheery atmosphere. The hostess was gowned in a classic gray crepe gown trimmed with bands of silver.

Assisting the hostess were Miss Bessie Christian, Mrs. Margaret Eacho, Mrs. Herbert Bonner, Mrs. Homer Hughes and Miss Bernadina Scherger, cousin of the hostess.

Virginians were in the majority at the party given by Mr. and Mrs. Smith. In the receiving line were Representative and Mrs. Frank Boykin, Representative and Mrs. Reid F. Murray, Representative and Mrs. Luther Patrick, Representative John W. Flannagan, jr., Representative and Mrs. Jennings Randolph, Representative and Mrs. Harry Sheppard and Mrs. David Tucker Brown.

Will Return to the City Today

Underwood & Underwood

Attractive Mrs. Dabney Thompson, of Cincinnati, with her husband is making her home in Washington for the spring season. Mr. and Mrs. Thompson spent the week-end in New York but are expected to return here today. Last week they were the guests in whose honor Mrs. D. C. Stapleton and her daughter, Miss Stellita Stapleton, entertained at dinner

Blanchards Fete Bridal Couple

Miss Charlotte Ball and Charles Seymour, whose marriage will take place on May 4 in the Fort Myer Chapel, were guests of honor at a party given yesterday afternoon at the home of Mr. and Mrs. J. R. Blanchard in Arlington. Hosts were Mrs. Lutz Wahl, widow of Brig. Gen. Wahl, and Mr. and Mrs. Blanchard.

Miss Ball is the daughter of Mrs. William Ball and the late Col. Ball, of Colorado, and attended Miss Madeira's School. Mr. Seymour's father, Charles Seymour, is president of Yale University.

White snapdragons and sweet peas were used throughout the house yesterday. Guests included Miss Emily Collins, of Boston; Miss Emmeline Hill, Mr. and Mrs. William Simpson, Mrs. Ball, mother of the bride-elect; Mr. and Mrs. Phillip Brown, Miss Gretchen Wahl, Dr. and Mrs. Robert Craig, Douglas Montgomery, Mr. and Mrs. Curtis Christiansen and Theodore Christiansen, Mr. and Mrs. Karl Hogelund, Mr. and Mrs. Edwin Hammond and Mr. and Mrs. Robert Shaw.

Host Uses Verse To Invite Guests For Garden Party

Come into my garden, should the day be fine
And sample the punch, perchance some wine.
But, should the rain begin to fall,
On Sunday then, come one, come all.

No optimist is Edward Van Devanter who has issued the invitations above, about prevailing weather conditions. The party is scheduled to be held at his home in Alexandria on Saturday at 5 p. m.

This party will be in the nature of a welcome to Mrs. Gladys Rousseau, widow of Rear Admiral Rousseau. For many years they owned the house at 3238 R street, now occupied by Col. and Mrs. Howard Davidson. Mrs. Rousseau has built a farm house at Fairfield, Conn.

Dartmouth Professor Elected Chairman of Book Association

Children's Magazines Have Great Influence On Literature, Eric P. Kelly Tells A. B. C. Club at Biennial 'Brunch'

By Jessie Ash Arndt
The Post Club Editor.

Books with appeal for children have become the classics of American literature, Eric P. Kelly, professor of journalism at Dartmouth College, told members of the A. B. C. Club yesterday at their biennial "Brunch," held at the Kennedy-Warren. He asserted that St. Nicholas and the Youth's Companion have had more influence on literature in this country than the Atlantic Monthly.

The "brunch" followed a meeting of the board of governors of the club at which Mr. Kelly was elected chairman to succeed Joseph Auslander, poetry consultant of the Library of Congress, Mrs. Grace Thompson Seton, explorer and author of the new book, "Poison Arrows," as a member of the board, announced the club's first citation of merit in the field of children's literature, which goes to Robert Lawson, an illustrator. The citation commends his "delicacy of style, sure technique in many media and his imaginative humor and genius for interpreting big ideas to little minds."

The award is designed to encourage authors, illustrators and musicians who do work in the children's field. In the absence of Mr. Lawson, the presentation esterday was received for him by the children's author, Marion King.

Mr. Kelly credited children's books or those with appeal for them with being those that endured. He termed "Huckleberry Finn" the great American novel.

Another honor guest was Nancy Byrd Turner, of the editorial staff of Houghton-Mifflin, who read some of her poems for children—merry, whimsical pieces about such things as "automobeetles" and "June-buggies" and the banana method of getting out of one's clothes as compared to the orange peel way.

Among other honor guests were Dr. Charles Edward Russell, Catherine C. Coblentz, the poet; Marie Peary Stafford (the snow baby); Alice Hutchins Drake, Edna M. Coleman, historian; Lesley Frost, Dr. Julia Hahn, Peter Carter, Howard T. Bailey, Josephine Chandler Horner, the poet; Marion King, Edith Lathrop, head of rural libraries for the Office of Eucation; Ethel Summy, Alberta Walker, author of plays and pageants; Helen Orr Watson, Arthur Clarendon Smith, Mrs. Curtis Lamson, Mrs. Mary Meek and Atkeson Moore.

Another guest in whom there was much interest was George Bughner, chief machinist's mate, U. S. N., one of the four men who received the Congressional Medal and the Navy Cross for going down in the diving bell to rescue Squalus victims.

James Taylor, president of the club, the name of which has been changed from "Authors of Books for Children Club" to "Association of Books for Children," greeted the guests. Miss Alice Scott, program chairman, presided. One of the features of the occasion was the series of introductions of distinguished guests by different club members, all students or alumni of Wilson Teachers College, where the organization had its inception. Dr. Stanwood Cobb, one of the guests, remarked he had never heard, either here or abroad, such gracious introductions. Mrs. Dorothy DeMuth Watson, sponsor of the club, and others of the Wilson faculty, were present.

The program was opened by the Lord's Prayer, sung by Mme. Elvina Orlicz-Dreszer, accompanied by Miss Pearl Adams, the composer. At the close, she sang "Omnipresence," written by Miss Adams, with the composer at the at the piano.

There was also a group of children's songs by Elizabeth Butterfield, another composer here for the Pen Women's convention. Four little girls—Jean Davis Barbara Desper, Lydia McAllister and Betty Russell, of St. Alban's choir—sang them, accompanied by Miss Butterfield.

Entertaining between the hours of 5 and 7 o'clock yesterday, Mr. and Mrs. Henry Deimel, jr., feted Mr. and Mrs. Grover Grady, who are here from San Francisco for a week. Mr. Grady is Mrs. Deimel's brother.

Tomorrow Mrs. Grady will be guest of honor at a luncheon to be given by her sister-in-law, Mrs. Henry F. Grady, wife of the Assistant Secretary of State, and Mrs. Minnie Mae Fleming at the Shoreham Hotel.

Sharing honors at this large luncheon will be Mrs. Alfred Lafayette Ridings, of Sherman, Tex., who with her husband, Dr. Ridings, arrived here on Friday. They are visiting for several days as the guests of their son-in-law and daughter, Dr. and Mrs. Clarence Lee Miller. During their stay here Dr. and Mrs. Ridings will be widely feted.

The Deimel home on Macomb street was decked with sweetpeas and snapdragons yesterday. Mrs. Deimel wore a hostess gown with a long black skirt and lipstick red blouse. Mrs. Grady had selected a frock in tones of chartreuse and yellow.

Assisting the hostess throughout the afternoon were Mrs. Henry F. Grady, Mrs. Temple Seay, Mrs. Ross McIntire, Mrs. Allen Minnix, Mme. Dimitriu, wife of the Assistant Commercial Counselor of the Rumanian Legation; Mrs. Harold Bowens and Mrs. C. F. Burton.

Alice Deming To Be Married

Mrs. William I. Deming of Chevy Chase, Md., has announced the engagement of her daughter, Miss Alice Fitz-Hugh Deming, to Harry D. Ruddiman, son of Mrs. Harry Ruddiman.

Miss Deming was graduated from Gunston Hall School here and majored in art at the University of Michigan at Ann Arbor.

MISS ALICE DEMING

Mr. Ruddiman received his A. B. degree from George Washington University before attending Harvard Law School. He received the LL.B. degree at Harvard and is a member of the District bar. He is associated with the firm of King & King, of this city.

Mrs. Truxtun Beale To Give Dinner At Decatur House

Mrs. Truxtun Beale will entertain at a dinner party April 26 at Decatur House. She will take her guests on to the Polish Embassy for the concert which Artur Rebinstein will give on that date.

Another dinner hostess that evening, who is taking her guests on to the concert, is Princess Boncompagni. The concert is being given under the auspices of the Washington Committee for Polish Relief.

Carville Cushes On Wedding Trip

Mr. and Mrs. E. Carville Cush are en route to Florida following their marriage in Baltimore, April 16. The bride formerly was Miss Mary E. Riley, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George T. Riley. She was educated in schools in Renovo, Pa., before entering Peabody Conservatory in Baltimore. Mr. Cush, the son of the late Mr. and Mrs. E. T. Cush, of Pueblo, Col., was educated in Pueblo schools and is a graduate of National University School of Law.

A number of Washingtonians motored to Baltimore to attend the wedding, which took place at 4 o'clock in St. Ingnatius Church, with the Rev. Father Hugh Dalton officiating.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a powder blue gown, small blue feather-trimmed hat, matching accessories and orchid corsage. The bride was attended by Mrs. Newton Riley, of Washington, who wore a gown of dusty pink, a small dusty pink feather hat, corresponding accessories, and a corsage of talisman roses.

Also attending was Miss Genevieve Davis, of Baltimore, who wore an aqua gown, small white flower hat, corresponding accessories and a corsage of pale yellow roses. The other attendants were Newton Riley, brother of the bride, and C. D. MacIntosh, both of Washington.

The members of the wedding party were guests at a luncheon at the home of the Misses Loretta and Genevieve Davis, in Baltimore, preceding the ceremony.

Mr. and Mrs. Cush will return from their wedding trip the latter part of the month and will make their home in Washington.

CAPITAL WHIRL

By SALLY SWIFT

WHEN YOU HEAR people going about saying, "I think it will be fun at the Fahnestocks' tonight," you know the party is a success before it starts. The dinner and dance thus anticipated came up to expectations with such a bang that guests remained until six in the morning. Snowden and Bea Fahnestock have a gift for mixing out-of-town guests with Washingtonians in one big, happy whirl. For example, Kenneth Clinton, down from New York with his wife for the party, thought, along about 4 o'clock, that perhaps he'd better get a little sleep before setting out next day for the Eastern Shore of Maryland. Mr. Clinton is an architect and interested in the old houses in this part of the country. But attractive, dark-haired Mrs. Clinton was surrounded by four Washington cavaliers so Mr. Clinton went right on dancing saying, "Can I help it if this party is so good that I don't see any old houses?"

Jacques de Thier of the Belgian Embassy twirled his partner expertly and so vigorously that an ornamental comb flew out of her hair and across the room. Winston Thomas, brother of Commander William D. Thomas and one of New York's favorite wits, was discussing with me a mutual friend of years ago in Paris. A third person asked of whom we were speaking. "Oh," said "Winkie" Thomas, "he's just an old painter of the baby-couldn't-help-it school."

Bea Fahnestock was having a tremendous rush, yet found time to look after each guest personally and Snowden saw that no lady lacked a partner. Late in the evening a very nice Russian, Michael Werloff, was persuaded to sing for us some French, German and English songs, which he did graciously and in a beautiful, clear baritone.

MR. AND MRS. JAMES CLEMENT DUNN gave an interesting and gay cocktail party as a prelude to the Fahnestock dance. Several distinguished-looking men were members of the Order of the Cincinnati who had come to attend the dinner of the order given Saturday night at their house on Massachusetts avenue. The Hungarian Minister arrived at the Dunns with his guest, Tibor Eckhardt, just over from Europe on the Manhattan. Mr. Eckhardt is a Privy Councilor and leader of the party of the small landholders in Hungary, which is, at the moment, an opposition party. He is here on mission for his government, which would seem to indicate that his opposition is not of a too serious nature. Mr. Eckhardt has been to the United States before, speaks beautiful English and is one of those men whose conversation has a real value.

Also at the Dunns were the former Foreign Minister of Belgium and Mme. Theunis, who have spent a good deal of time in Washington this winter, Mrs. Robert Low Bacon, back from a recent trip to Mexico and accompanied by her daughter, Ivy; Mrs. Lee Warren in a fetching spring bonnet, Mrs. George Angus Garrett and her sister, Mrs. Robert Clarkson, of New York; the Minister of Australia and Mrs. Richard Casey, Mr. and Mrs. Edward Burling, jr., Mr. and Mrs. George Howe, the Brazilian Ambassador and Senhora Martins, Senora de Cardenas, wife of the Spanish Ambassador; Mrs. Hallett Johnson, Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Feis, Mrs. Matthew Hanna, Mr. and Mrs. Jack Newbold, M. and Mme. Charles Lucet, Keith Officer, Jacques Dumaine and Christopher Bramwell.

Also present were the Polish Ambassador, Dr. Hamilton Rice, of New York, down for the Cincinnati dinner and the Fahnestock dance, the Counselor of the Argentine Embassy and Mme. Bunge, and Miss Marian Trumbull.

MR. AND MRS. ELVIN SEIBERT were being welcomed on all sides. Mrs. Seibert is the former Christina Beck-Friis, who spent her young girlhood in Washington when her father, Baron Johann Beck-Friis, was Swedish Counselor here a few years ago. The whole Beck-Friis family was very popular in Washington and her friends are delighted to have Christina back. Baron Beck-Frils is now in Oslo, where he is Swedish Minister, but Christina has word that her mother and young brother are safe in the mountains somewhere.

The Seiberts have come here from Bangkok, where Mr. Seibert was Third Secretary in the United States Legation. They have taken a house on Twenty-first street and will settle down for several months while Mr. Seibert is on temporary detail at the Department of State.

Marion Callahan Plights Troth To G. R. McCulloch

Mr. and Mrs. James J. Callahan have announced the engagement of their daughter, Marion Elizabeth, to George Robert McCulloch, son of Mr. and Mrs. George M. McCulloch, of this city. Miss Callahan is a graduate of the Convent of the Sacred Heart, Kenwood, Albany, N. Y.; West Hill, London, England, and the College of the Sacred Heart, Manhattanville, N. Y.

Miss Jean Waltz, Paul W. Warren To Wed May 4

Invitations have been received in Washington for the marriage of Miss Jean Lathrop Waltz, of San Gabriel, Calif., to Paul William Warren, son of Mr. and Mrs. George S. Warren of this city.

The marriage will take place May 4, in the Episcopal Church of Our Saviour in San Gabriel. Mr. Warren, a former student at Central High School and Maryland University, is now connected with the Lockheed Aircraft Corporation, of Burbank, Calif.

Matron Has Her Day in the Sun

By Marshall Adams
The Post Fashion Editor.

Whoever still feels that the approaching summer holds terror for the woman with a mature figure hasn't seen the collection of youthful matrons' clothes at a Washington shop. Here are no world-tired stylish stout clothes with naught but surplus bodices and solid raven colorings, but rather smart, youthfully styled matrons' clothes with subtle tricks in draping to subdue bustlines, and dull-surfaced materials to give optical illusion to hippy figures. Typical of this advance collection is the air-conditioned sheer black net (at left) worn by Mrs. Margaret Rhinehart, at a Shoreham Hotel fashion promenade. This dress is collarless, buttons neatly down the front, and has spry suede boutonniere and belt color accents. An indispensible town choice for good grooming during the hot days. Other dresses, as good for matron as daughter, are pastel cotton chambrays with trimly tucked bosom fronts and quiet belt and button detail. There are dinner costumes, too, of black crepe with red and white front panels to take the curse off the eternal "black with black" dinner clothes

Spring Brings a Parade of Food Ideas

NEW POTATOES and carrots, fresh mint and lamb chops is certainly a parade of spring food ideas. It is food also that your family will be happy to have you parade to the dining table, especially if you develop these items into a Lamb Chop Grill and serve with Horseradish Cream. These are the directions you use to achieve such an appealing grill.

Lamb Chop Grill With Horseradish Cream

Buy rib, shoulder or loin lamb chops, ¾ to 1 inch thick. Place chops on broiler rack about 3 inches from source of heat. If the distance must be less, reduce the temperature so that the meat broils at moderate temperature. When nicely browned, season with salt, pepper and a shake of celery salt, and then turn. Arrange medium size new potatoes, boiled and skinned, that have been rolled in melted butter, and medium sized new carrots, treated likewise, and rings of canned pineapple. Continue broiling, turning the vegetables to brown evenly. Chops cut an inch thick require about 15 minutes of broiling, turning the vegetables to brown evenly. Arrange the carrots on pineapple, allowing two to the serving if small, and sprinkle with chopped mint.

Horseradish cream is a zestful addition to the lamb chop grill and is equally as delicious served with beef. This is how you make it: Melt 1 tablespoon butter and stir in one tablespoon flour with a half teaspoon sugar, a shake of salt and paprika and a few drops of onion juice. Then slowly add ½ cup beef broth or water with a bouillon cube. Cook until thickened, smooth and add ½ cup cream and 2 tablespoons grated horseradish. Serve hot with lamb chops.

Sight at Night Aided by Vitamin

Ask yourself these questions: "Have I ever had difficulty seeing after I have passed a driver who failed to dim his lights? Do I have trouble adjusting my eyes to a darkened theater?" If the answers are yes, you may be suffering from a lack of vitamin A.

Where do we find this vitamin? The answer is: watch for the highly colored vegetables and fruits such as carrots, peas, spinach. Butter, cheese, milk, liver, egg yolks and fish liver oils also contain vitamin A.

Cooking does not destroy the vitamin A in foods. But if you receive your vitamin A from fish liver oils, then keep the bottle in a dark cold place and wipe off the top of the bottle so that it won't get rancid. Keep the air out, or your supply will lose its vitamin A contents.

A Woman's New York

Peggy Joyce Gives Smile to Husband Of Columnist

New York, April 21.

"Miss Hughes and I were sitting in the lobby of the Savoy Plaza," J. Twistleton Hall told the pop-eyed press this morning, "minding our own business, when along came Peggy Hopkins Joyce with a fellow and she smiled at me."

And that is indeed the truth. I don't think she was laughing at me, for I had my best suit on and looked right nice, if I do say so as I shouldn't. Probably she remembers me from a party I met her at some ten years back, for they say that Peg never forgets a face. How she is on names I wouldn't know. Or maybe she was just being sociable, for Peggy is an affable girl.

What I want to say is that La Joyce looks better now then ever before in her life. She's put on a little weight, something she always needed when she was in the limelight. I'll not forget the first time I saw her, in the Earl Carroll "Vanities." The 24 chorus boys in tail coats knelt down and sang "Pretty Peggy, we love your golden hair," and so on, and then the star came out at the top of a flight of stairs looking like the ghost of a thin blonde. It was pretty awful. Now she's nicely rounded, and mighty pretty. I have no notion what her age is, but anyhow, she doesn't look it.

Peggy hasn't been in the news or gossip for a long time. Since the death of her British fiance in that Swiss sleighing accident, she has neither been wed nor reported on the brink. Her place on the New York stage has been filled by dress or photographic models and the Brenda Frazier sort of kidlet. Peg keeps on living along here, her mess of jewels still intact, and looking fine. Her last husband, Count Gosta Morner, is now married to Gerry Fitch, a newspaper girl.

Mary Haworth's Mail

Man Suggests 'Breaking Off Gradually,' After Girl Is Deeply in Love and Counting on Marriage

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I have been going with a young man for a year, and during that time I have learned to love him dearly. We have seen each other on an average of three times a week or more, and my friends were already planning showers for me. We had talked of marriage, of course, and looked forward to our wedding day. However, he did not want to get married on his salary—he was earning $1,800 a year—as he said he "didn't want his wife to have to work forever."

We continued seeing each other, hoping he would get the raise he wanted. Then, through reorganization in his department, he was placed in an inferior position and now he fears either a salary cut or loss of his job. He says if he is fired, he will stop seeing me entirely. And meantime, he wants to see me only once a week. He says he never will marry so long as he continues to earn only $1,800 a year, and he thinks we should break off gradually. He wants me to see other men. He feels that is best, since his future is so uncertain.

Miss Haworth, how can a man talk that way to the girl he supposedly loves and plans to marry? Some time ago he said that his family wanted him to get married; that they felt it would "help him along," but now he turns around and says they would be angry if he married on his present income. Incidentally, I have never met his family, although they live here, as he always said, "it isn't necessary to meet families until a few weeks before the wedding."

Since he has taken this attitude, the bottom has dropped out of things for me. Usually I am not one to brood. I take an active interest in sports and enjoy concerts and people. But I can't help feeling that I have been "taken for a buggy ride" all these months; and that I am left holding the bag, in addition to facing the prospect of mending a broken heart. His plan to see me once a week makes me feel more miserable than ever, since I see how hopeless it all is.

He is 28 and I will soon be 27. I earn $1,440 a year and would be willing to work after marriage. And I can't help thinking if he really loved me he wouldn't mind marrying on his income, so long as his job is assured. And yet I know he couldn't be happy for very long, if obliged to deny himself material things. He likes to keep up with the Joneses, and his family is well-to-do. Don't you think I am entitled to more consideration from him? Please straighten me out.

MISERABLE.

Take the Man's Hint; Let Him Go Quickly

DEAR MISERABLE: The turn of events indicates that you have, indeed, been "taken for a ride" by this young man, with his persuasive but insincere allusions to marriage as a future possibility. Apparently he wanted you for the time being, but not for always; and now that he has tired of you, or is increasingly alarmed by your friends' "shower plans," he is "letting you down" as tactfully as he knows how.

There is nothing to do, of course, but let him go. His present income and unpredictable prospects have little to do with his renunciation heroics. He just doesn't want to get married to you, and he is trying to make that point clear, without saying so bluntly.

Had marriage not been so insistently on your mind, it is possible he would have continued beauing you indefinitely, as a sort of emotional stop-gap. But it is just as well to have found out where you stand with him. And my advice to you is to follow his suggestion to "see other men," and stop counting on him. M. H.

Should Girl Ask Boy For His Picture?

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: Is it permissible for a girl to ask her boy friend for his picture?—or should the request come from him? And, when you have met new acquaintances at a social gathering, whose place is it to say that the meeting was a pleasure? —the person who is departing or the person to whom he is saying good-by? ANTONIA.

Better Let Man Take the Initiative

DEAR ANTONIA: There seems to be an unwritten law that "man proposes and woman disposes" in a courting relationship. Thus, a girl would be departing from that tacitly accepted code; would be assuming the unbecoming role of aggressor, if she were directly to solicit from a man the gift of his picture. However, if a man had indicated that he wanted to make her a present, and was undecided what to select, she might suggest that he give her his picture. Or, if they were old sweethearts, and he was going away—to school, let's say; or even for the summer—she might say it would be nice to have his picture to remember him by. But when a boy gives his picture to a girl, he means it as a pretty significant gift; and so would much rather do the proffering than have her do the asking.

There is no set rule, no "best way," for swapping protestations of pleasure-in-meeting. Ordinarily, the man—if he means it— takes the initiative in telling a girl how much he has enjoyed meeting her, and that he hopes to see her again. But if the girl has been the person most impressed, and he omits complimentary reassurances when saying good-by, she may with full propriety tell him, if she wants to, that she has greatly enjoyed talking to him (or, perhaps, that she's sorry they didn't get a chance for a better talk), and she hopes they'll meet again.

As someone has said, "Politeness is to do and say the kindest thing in the kindest way." So don't let ceremony stand in the way of promoting friendship, when you sense its possibilities in a given meeting. M. H.

RARELY does the guest see new faces, hear new voices, among the servitors at The Homestead.

For it is a policy of management to have as nearly as possible the same personnel, year after year, to serve you.

That is one of the several reasons why you always have the impression —or the conviction—of being better-served at The Homestead than elsewhere. And it's as true of service in your room, or in the Great Hall, or on the lawns, as in the Dining Room.

Below the Coffee

"This tea is simply making a wreck of me!"

"What's the matter?"

"It's about the pouring——"

"Oh, you can always get people to pour!"

"Yes, but I've asked five Senators' wives to pour."

"Well?"

"And if they work on 30-minute shifts that means only four can pour coffee."

"Well, let the fifth one pour tea."

"I couldn't do that! Coffee outranks tea!"

"Oh, that's right!"

"And besides I have three Representatives' wives pouring tea. I can't put a Senator's wife with them down at the tea service."

"Oh well, I tell you! Put the extra Senator's wife at the punch bowl!"

"Heaven's! That would be worse than ever! Tea outranks punch."

"Are you sure?"

"Absolutely!"

"But the most people are always around the punch bowl."

"I can't help that. It's always been more important to pour tea than to serve punch."

"But times are changing——"

"Oh well, now, I'm not saying that the day won't come when punch won't outrank both tea and coffee, but the thing is—we have to be realistic and face facts as they are. Right now I wouldn't dare put anybody but young girls at the punch bowl."

"Well listen—are you having Senator Shucks' wife pour?"

"Yes."

"Why don't you put her down at the tea? She probably wouldn't know the difference."

"I wouldn't dare take a chance after what happened at Grace Tootle's."

"What happened?"

"Why Barbara Cragg simply went home when she found she was to pour tea while Cynthia Tweed poured coffee. You know Barbara's father was a general and Cynthia's husband's only in the Little Cabinet."

"Say, I have an idea! Let the extra Senator's wife pass the sandwiches!"

"Say—That's lower than serving punch."

"Well, then, let her show the guests the what-not collection."

"No-o, I think someone a little more active ought to do that."

"Well, of course you could split your pouring time into eight 15-minute periods."

"That still would leave me short at the coffee and I'd have to put three ordinary women with the Senators' wives."

"Well, move the three Representatives' wives up from the tea to fill out at the coffee."

"Then the Senators' wives would be mad."

"Well, why don't you ask three cave-dwellers to fill out at the coffee?"

"Say—that would insult everybody!"

"Then the only thing to do is just to give up serving tea."

"How on earth could I have a tea without TEA?"

"Well, maybe you could get the wife of—say an admiral, to sit in with the Senators' wives at the coffee."

"I don't know any—oh, wait! I could get the former wife of an admiral."

"Fine! Then maybe a D. A. R. vice president general . . . and the wife of a Presidential candidate——."

"Say, wait! The Representatives' wives would NEVER pour tea while a Presidential candidate's wife poured coffee—unless she was of the right party."

"Well, then, get one from the right party."

"But, you see, there'll be two right parties at the teacups—I have both Republicans and Democrats——"

"Then there's only one thing to do!"

"What?"

"Throw a cocktail party."

Carrots, French Style, Have Great Appeal

When you want to vary the vegetable dish, try making carrots in the French style. The addition of thinly sliced onions further enhances the dish.

Cook ¾ cup thinly sliced onions in ¼ cup shortening until golden; drain from fat. Brown 2 tablespoons flour in fat in pan. Add the onions, 3 cups thinly sliced raw carrots, 1½ cups water, 1½ teaspoons salt, 1 teaspoon sugar and ⅛ teaspoon papper. Cover closely; simmer 30 minutes or until carrots are tender.

Brightening Up Room Will Cure Low Spring Mood

By Elizabeth MacRae Boykin

What every woman knows . . . that a flowered dress will do more than diamonds for her spring spirits . . . that a foolish little, pretty little spring hat will take 10 years off her feelings if not her looks. The same thing goes for a room in the spring . . . flowers by the yard to brighten up the scene and fresh bonnets for the lamps will lift any picture out of the winter dumps.

This recipe, tried out in a pleasant room recently, worked like a charm. It was an interesting room to begin with, with dusty mauve walls, light in value, and pale maple furniture of rather formal character, mostly of Sheraton and Hepplewhite lines. A large floral hooked rug covered the floor. In winter, draperies of floral sateen on a dusty mauve ground (the wall color was taken from this fabric) were complemented by furniture coverings in dusty pinks and in sage greens.

When summer comes the entire scheme is changed. The draperies are replaced by yellow organdy curtains, made very full; the upholstered furniture, even the side chairs, all are zipped into yellow flowered cretonne on a white ground and the winter lamp shades are replaced with yellow organdy petticoat shades.

Gen. Miller, Indian Fighter, Dies at 83

Was in Spanish War And Philippines; Invented Army Target

Brig. Gen. Samuel Warren Miller, U. S. A., 83, Indian fighter in the Montana Territories and a noted Infantry officer with 46 years' service, died yesterday at his home, 1661 Crescent place northwest. He had been in failing health for several months.

A native of Huntington, Pa., Gen. Miller was graduated from West Point in 1879, and took part in many Indian campaigns in the early 1880's. He was awarded the silver star citation and was cited for gallantry in action against Sioux Indians at Emmeli Creek, Mont., in 1880.

Invented Infantry Target

An expert in Indian tactics, he made a study at this time of sign languages and could converse fluently in the Indian speech.

After service in the Spanish-American War and the Philippine Insurrection, he was appointed commandant of the School of Musketry at Presideo, Calif. There he devised the self-registering aerial target, an aid in the development of accurate Infantry fire.

In 1913 he was sent to Europe to study at musketry schools there, and was official United States observer at the German maneuvers at Breslau, Germany, in September of that year.

Appointed brigadier general in August, 1917, he commanded the 160th Depot Brigade and the Eighty-fifth Infantry Division at Camp Custer, Battle Creek, Mich., during the World War. He retired February 10, 1921.

Was Twice Married

In 1881 Gen. Miller married Martha Cornelia Carmen, of Huntington, who died in 1924. He later married Mrs. Albert Mills, the former Alada Thurston Paddock. The second Mrs. Miller died in 1929.

Survivors include two daughters, Mrs. Robert G. Kirkwood, of Champaign, Ill., and Mrs. F. G. von Kummer, of Tarrytown, N. Y.; six grandchildren and a great-grandchild.

Gen. Miller was a member of the Army-Navy Club, the Order of Indian Wars and the Society of Veterans of Indian Wars.

Burial has been set tentatively for Tuesday in Arlington National Cemetery.

POSTLUDE

By Ray C. B. Brown

The Washington Saengerbund (Herbert Herzfeld, director) presents its eighty-ninth anniversary concert Sunday afternoon in the Willard Hotel ballroom, assisted by the Baltimore Arion (Theodore Hemberger, director) and the Women's Chorus of the Washington Saengerbund (Kurt Hetzel, director).

In observance of its eighty-ninth anniversary, the Washington Saengerbund gave a concert yesterday afternoon in the Willard Hotel ballroom, which held a large and demonstrative audience. President Paul Otterbach, in his address of welcome, spoke with justifiable pride of the long life of the organization and the part it has played in the maintenance of German choral music. His reference to the musical idealism of similar groups in many American cities might have been more extended, for the saengerbunds throughout the United States have been of incalculable value in the development of the Nation's musical life.

BROWN

The Washington Saengerbund was already 20 years old when Leopold Damrosch came to this country in 1871 to conduct the New York Maennergesangverein, bringing with him his 9-year-old son, Walter, who is now one of the deans of American music. This is but one instance of a German singing society bringing about unforseen results in artistic growth. These organizations, spreading the influence of good music, helped to prepare the ground for the orchestral work of Theodore Thomas, Georg Henschel, Wilhelm Gericke and other German conductors.

Herbert K. Herzfeld, the young director who has recently taken over the baton, led the Saengerbund in the first group of songs: Conradin Kreutzer's "Der Tag des Herrn," Brahms' "In Stiller Nacht," Felix Guenther's "Erntelied" and two folk songs. Evidences of his training ability were noticeable in the neat performance of Guenther's interesting chorus which demands harmonic exactitude.

Members of the Baltimore Arion then took the stage to sing under the direction of Theodore Hemberger "Matrosengrab" by Hermann Sonnet, Julius Witt's "Gut' Nacht, ihr Blumen" and Hugo Juengst's "Dorfidylle." The combined Washington and Baltimore organizations were directed by Mr. Herzfeld in Theodore Koerner's "Komm, Schoener Tag" and Beethoven's "Die Ehre Gottes aus der Natur."

Kurt Hetzel led the Women's Chorus of the Washington Saengerbund in Hermann Reutier's arrangement of the folk song, "Rosestock-Holderblueh," Paul Engelskirchen's "Waldmorgen" and Schubert's "Wiengenlied." The closing numbers, sung by the combined chorus of men and women, were Charles Cadman's "The Builder" and Emmer Adams' "The Bells of St. Mary's." The entire program was marked by a commendable choral standard and by the zest of the singing.

The Dance Playhouse Group (Evelyn Davis, director) presents Sunday night the premieres of "Curtain-Raiser" with music by Frances Brunt and "The Penitentes" with music by Charles Magnan. Participating dancers: Evelyn Davis, Ruth Burks, Elizabeth Burtner, Ruth Ellis, Mary Happer, Priscilla Howe, Lucie Petta, Clair Redfield, Rita Rubinstein, Marta Williams, Carl Bradley, Jerry Ross and David Turner.

That resourceful and clever choreographer, Evelyn Davis, put on display last evening, with the loyal collaboration of the Dance Playhouse Group, two new examples of her imaginative invention in plastic movement. One of them, "Curtain-Raiser," was sheer entertainment on a base of geometrical patterns, and the other, "The Penitentes," was a serious dance suite evoking in terms of symbolism the practices of certain sixteenth century religious orders which enacted the Crucifixion as an Easter penance.

In "Curtain-Raiser," such good old American social diversions as the square dance, the waltz and the schottische were utilized as material for an amusing depiction of the folk expression in dancing. The music by Frances Brunt was an ingenious pastiche of dance tunes so closely adapted to originals as to seem almost recognizable. The dances, spirited and gay, were woven with choreographic skill into a consistent design which had structural proportions.

Before the main event of the evening came two interludes: a pas de deux, "Salutation," danced by Elizabeth Burtner, who designed the pattern, and Jerry Ross, and a revival by Miss Davis of her solo dance, "Six, Sixteen and Sixty," in which was proved that, if woman is mutable, she is also unchanging in her perennial charm. The music for "Salutation" was by Miss Brunt, who composed it in an agreeable phase of the modern idiom.

In "The Penitentes," Evelyn Davis has produced her most powerful and moving work as a choreographer. The suite has five sections: Prayer, Interlude, Fanaticism, Flagellation and Death and Resurrection. The strength of the basic design binds the sections into an integral whole, and the utter sincerity of the animating purpose has a profound emotional effect. In details of gesture and group movements, as in the complete joining of the segments, there is a logical perfection that has no weak links.

Charles Magnan's music for this suite, reproduced from a record of the piano score, has a weird atmosphere as though it had been an improvisation under the stress of an ideational obsession. The use of the Dorian mode imparts a remoteness that has no relation to temporal things and conveys the impression of the eternal verity of the sacrificial motive. Between the sections of the suite, the solo oboe of Emil Spitzer sounded themes pertinent to the action and suggestive of an invisible choragus directing the scene.

Friday the Anacostia Association will meet at the Junior and Senior High School at 8 p. m., and the Burroughs Association will meet at the Buroughs School at the same hour.

English Priest Addresses Catholic Evidence Guild

The Rev. Dr. William E. Orchard, writer and Catholic priest of the diocese of Westminster, London, last night asked what is wrong with fundamental philosophical thinking today that so many persons object to any universal truth.

He addressed nearly 500 persons at a meeting of the Catholic Evidence Guild at the Mayflower Hotel on "Our Attitude Toward Those Without."

Dr. Orchard discussed differences in the Catholic and Protestant churches, and said that "no man can get along in life without a ruling authority." Scoring the "atheistic flaming idealist," he cited Lenin and Mussolini as men of the type to whom "everythng he once believed in he now hates, and everything he once hated he now believes in."

Emphasizing the importance of "the way of conversion and prayer," he declared that "the kind of conversion we should be most keen about is conversion to God."

Dr. Orchard is a former member of the Episcopalian and Presbyterian clergy who entered the Catholic Church several years ago. He was introduced last night by the Rev. Charles A. Hart, professor of philosophy at Catholic University. Harry Kirk, president of the Catholic Evidence Guild in Washington, presided.

Henpecked Frog Who Has to Mind Babies Due at Zoo

A frog so henpecked that he has to mind the babies will soon take up residence at the Zoo here.

The browbeaten fellow, who has no first name, but whose family in scientific circles is known as rhinoderma darwini, is a member of the South American and Antarctic collection being brought here by Malcolm Davis, Zoo bird curator, who is due in New York Tuesday on the liner Santa Maria. Davis went South with the Byrd expedition.

The frog belongs to a class of South American amphibians, of which the male carries the eggs around in its mouth from the time the female lays them until they're hatched.

Hearings to Open Today on District Appropriations

Hearings on the 1941 District appropriation bill will open at 10 a. m. today in the Senate Appropriations Committee chambers before a subcommittee headed by Senator Overton (Democrat), of Louisiana.

The District Commissioners, as first witnesses, will make a request that the Senate restore $600,000 in items cut from the bill by the House.

Gray Ladies' Exercises

Graduation exercises of the Gray Ladies, Walter Reed unit of the Hospital and Recreation Corps, American Red Cross, will be Wednesday at 3:30 p. m. at the Red Cross House, Army Medical Center.

Astrologer for Mrs. Harding Afraid 3d Term Is in the Stars

MRS. HORACE CHAMPNEY

By Gerald G. Gross

McNutt?

Dewey?

"His Jupiter is weak, which makes his outlook not so bright."

Roosevelt?

"I'm scared to death he's going to get back in again."

Marcia, the astrologer, who claims to have forecast the nomination, election and death of Warren G. Harding and the assassination of President James G. Garfield (she was a girl of 15 then), is at it again—or still.

Now a patient in the Washington Home for Incurables, the cheery horoscope-maker yesterday agreed to reveal what the stars and planets have told her about prospects of 1940 White House aspirants.

"But remember" she made it clear, "it's still too early for me to come right out and say so-and-so will be elected. I never saw so many hats in the ring! And before I can make a prediciton, I must prepare charts for all the major possibilities. That takes time—and patience."

But this much, Marcia—Mrs. Horace M. Champney prefers to be known by her professional name—can state with conviction: Mr. McNutt is definitely out as a Presidential possibility, at least, as far as 1940 is concerned.

"He may as well lie down and roll over," said the white haired astrologer, who used to go to the White House frequently to "read" for Mrs. Harding.

Senators, Congressmen, and Government officials once beat a path to Marcia's door. The 20's were her halcyon days. Six years ago she entered the Home for Incurables as a patient but even now she receives numerous friends for horoscope readings.

She explains she does not want to go far out on a limb at this early stage and name the man who will be inaugurated President next January because "this is one job I wish to be careful not to bungle."

"If I ventured a prediction without first making charts on all the candidates, then that prediction went awry, my reputation would suffer," said Marcia. "It might undo all the respect which is attached to my name as an astrologer."

Whether President Roosevelt runs again or not, July will be a crisis month in his life, she declared.

Aside from politics, she is sure of one thing, because the heavens have told her so: Marcia will die in November.

"There's not much time left for me," she said, "but I have no regrets."

Violence Costs Lives of Five In D. C. Area

Falls, Gas, Shooting And Poison Are Methods of Death

Five persons died violently in the District area yesterday, of falls, gas, shooting and poison.

At Alexandria, Va., Gurney Sorrell, 25, of 2513 Randolph avenue, a floor-finishing contractor, stood on the porch of his wife's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Paul Hinsley, 14 East Bellefonte avenue, and put a bullet through his head. He was pronounced dead at Alexandria Hospital and Dr. Llewellyn Powell, city coroner, said no inquest would be held.

James L. Cook, 32, of 1015 Seventeenth place northeast, was found dead in a gas-filled room at his home last night. A certificate of suicide was issued by Deputy Coroner Christopher Murphy.

Deaths from a fall, from poison and from gas were recorded yesterday in Washington.

Lemuel K. Taylor, 46, of Annapolis, a veteran of the World War, was found unconscious early yesterday at the foot of a stair well in the west wing of the main building at Walter Reed Hospital, where he had been a patient since September. He was discovered by Lieut. Katherine M. Underdown, Army Nurse Corps, and was pronounced dead by Capt. A. A. Cardona, of the Walter Reed staff. Coroner A. Magruder MacDonald is investigating.

Found dead in her bed yesterday morning, Jane Z. Lofink, 25, of 1463 Ogden street northwest, was believed the victim of an overdose of a sleeping potion. Two notes, one to her roommate, Agatha Jones, who found her dead, the other to her mother in Wilmington, Del., lay on a table by her bed. Police said the note to her mother told of prolonged illness and fear she could not be cured; the other asked that certain bills be paid.

Several weeks ago Miss Lofink underwent treatment at Emergency Hospital and had been advised Saturday to return, Dr. Elmer Klein, of 6634 Barnaby street northwest, told police. Dr. MacDonald witheld a death certificate pending an autopsy.

A native of Wilmington, Miss Lofink came to Washington six years ago to work in the Department of Agriculture. She transferred to the War Department and, a few months ago, back to Agriculture. She leaves her parents, two brothers and a sister, all of Wilmington.

Andrew Murphy, 29, of 1121 I street northeast, was found yesterday afternoon by his father, Sylvester Murphy, retired policeman, slumped over a gas stove. Five jets were open.

Murphy was pronounced dead by a Casualty Hospital ambulance surgeon after a 15-minute effort at artificial respiration by a fire rescue squad. Deputy Coroner Murphy issued a certificate of suicide.

Armed Robbers Hold Up Four In Capital

Victims Include Bus, Cab Drivers Hotel Clerk, Pedestrian

Armed robbers held up a bus driver, hotel clerk, cab driver and pedestrian early yesterday and escaped with loot totaling less than $50.

Ferdinand I. Greubel, clerk at the Fox Hotel, 916 Fourteenth street northwest, was held up by two white men, one of whom, police believe, is the long-sought "pompadour" bandit, who committed a series of robberies here a month ago, then disappeared.

The men, both of whom had pompadour haircuts, rented a room at the hotel, sent Greubel out for a bottle of whisky, then followed him to the desk. There they seized the clerk, pressed a long-bladed knife against his ribs and ordered him to empty the cash drawer. They escaped with $17.

A gunman with a short-cropped, brown mustache, held up Kyle C. Miller, of 428 Gallatin street northwest, after hailing his empty bus at Seventeenth and Monroe streets northeast. He took $18.42 and ordered Miller to drive five blocks before stopping for other passengers.

Clifton Chidress, of 3620 Eleventh street northwest, was held up by two marauders, one armed with a gun, the other with a knife, on Thirteenth street between N and O streets northwest. They robbed him of $13 in bills and ran down the street.

Two colored passengers held up Robert Glover, cab driver, colored, of 555 Twenty-fifth place northeast, at Fifth and Franklin streets northwest. They robbed him of 60 cents after brandishing a nickel-plated revolver and escaped on foot.

Ambulance Collides With Auto; None Hurt

A Casualty Hospital ambulance rushing a patient to treatment for a leg injury collided with an automobile at Fifteenth and Rosedale streets northeast last night. No one was injured and both vehicles escaped serious damage.

The ambulance was conveying Theodore F. Patton, 36, of 529 Fourteenth street northeast, from the 1500 block of Benning road northeast, where he had injured his left leg in a fall. He was transferred to another ambulance and continued his trip.

Liquor Sale Condemned By Pastors

Dr. Blackwelder And Rev. R. W. Loew Criticize District's Control System

The local system of liquor control was condemned from the Reformation Lutheran pulpit last night by Dr. Oscar F. Blackwelder, pastor, and the Rev. Ralph W. Loew, assistant.

"Society recognizes that there is a problem in setting up a control board," declared the Rev. Mr. Loew, charging that "too frequently such agencies have been used as political footballs, part of a spoils system, and locally, another indication of the defects of non-representative government."

He said that, with 16,000 men and 1,465 women arrested for drunkeness in public places in 1938 and intoxication causing more than one-half of jail commitments, "the citizen who must bear the cost of operating these institutions ought consider whether liquor should be made so freely available."

Dr. Blackwelder declared that "when the alcoholic beverage business of the District totals $30,000,000 a year and the public school system gets only $13,000,000 then the problem is a social one, and the church must be concerned.

"Some of us who do a rather large private pastoral ministry know from personal observation and experience the devastating, undermining effect of alcoholic beverages" he continued. "It isn't a theoretical question with us. It is flesh and blood. We deal with wrecks. I would like for liquor dealers to meet some youths and older people whose wrecked lives have contributed to the sales value of liquor licenses in the District."

Capital News In Brief

Italians Celebrate

Prince don Asconio de Colonna, Ambassador of Italy, yesterday urged some 500 Washington Italians to support their motherland in an address at ceremonies marking the 2,693d anniversary of the founding of Rome.

Commendatore Vittorio Bifulco, chancellor of the embassy, outlined the history of the Roman Empire and of the Catholic Church. The ceremonies were held at the embassy.

Medals were presented for patriotic services to Dr. Eugenio Forcione, Rocco Pisani and Rosario Guiliamini, all of Washington. Those attending included representatives of the Italian war veterans, the Lido Civic Club, Columbia-Garibaldi Lodge, Casa di Italia, the Boveglio Club and the Club Fiumidinisi.

Loser Hopping Mad

Washington police last night had an artificial leg on their hands and were hoping its owner would call for it. They don't like to have artificial legs kicking around headquarters.

The leg, dressed with a gray trouser and white-brown shoe, was found in his cab by James E. Martin, of 427 H street northwest, who told police he discovered the limb after picking up a passenger at Sixth and M streets northwest and dropping him off at First and K streets northwest.

A Delicate Case

Detectives scratched their heads and glanced furtively at each other at headquarters yesterday as word of a new whodunnit got abroad among them.

Helen Neiss, 24, of New Haven, Conn., a performer with the Wirth Circus at Riverside Stadium, had reported a theft. Just how to go about solving this mystery was likely to prove something in which no aid could be expected from precedent or the police manual.

Miss Neiss reported the theft of eight rhinestone-studded brassieres. She valued them at $350.

Two Ways to Get Poor

A gypsy who promised to bless her money stole $350 from Bertha Selley, 203 O street northwest, she reported to police yesterday.

Gilbert J. Moore, of Longview, Tex., told police a stranger who accosted him in a downtown hotel "won" $220 from him in a game of three-card monte.

A Glad Awakening

Miss Louise N. Royall, of 1628 Columbia road northwest, was wakened from a nap yesterday afternoon by excited friends who informed her she had won $110 for a question a radio orchestra was unable to answer by playing a popular song. The answer was "Lost in the Fog."

"But," she said, "I don't remember the question exactly."

Shot in Parking Row

John Murray's parking troubles landed him in Gallinger Hospital yesterday.

Murray, colored, 34, of 73 Fenton place northwest, told police he was backing into a spot in the 100 block of H street northwest when another colored man attempted to drive in behind him. In the ensuing discussion of who was right, Murray said, the other man reinforced his argument with firearms. Murray was shot in the chest.

Washington Schools Violate Civil Liberties, Congress on Rights Hears as Meeting Closes

Washington real estate interests were accused of responsibility in the fatal White Court apartment fire and flagrant violations of civil liberties in District schools were charged last night at a town meeting on civil liberties in the Washington Hotel.

More than 250 persons attended the session, which marked the close of a two-day conference sponsored by the Washington Committee for Democratic Action.

Sidney R. Katz, secretary-treasurer of the Washington Industrial Union Council, charged that a strong link existed between "real estate interests that control the city" and the fact that building laws were found to have been violated in constructing the house at 2131 O street northwest that burned up three weeks ago, claiming three lives.

Ennes, Schlesinger Speak

The charges of violations of civil liberties in the educational system came from Howard Ennes, chairman of the Washington Youth Council, and from James Schlesinger, who was graduated last year from George Washington University.

Ennes insisted that Washington schools, especially high schools, are rigidly controlled by a "closed circle" of powerful interests, including the Commissioners and the Board of Education.

Besides Katz and Ennes, the panel included Frances Rice, Alice Barrows, Herbert S. Wood, Representative Frank W. Fries and Charles S. Duke. Mrs. M. O. Lorenz, president of the District League of Women Voters, presided as moderator at the town meeting.

The conference, closing yesterday, adopted 13 resolutions. Among them were resolutions asking dissolution of the Dies Committee, attacking amendments to the Wagner Act, asking an investigation of the Federal Bureau of Investigation, championing colored civil rights, condemning the poll tax and favoring District suffrage.

The conference earlier yesterday heard Miss Elizabeth Curley Flynn, member of the Communist Party National Committee, say she would run for Congress next fall, "and if I can't get more votes than Dies got in Texas I'll be ashamed of myself."

Miss Flynn, one of the principal speakers at the morning session of the two-day conference, which opened Saturday, said her name would be on the Communist ticket in the South Bronx and her announcement of candidacy provoked vigorous applause. After discussing the Browder conviction and other actions against her party men, she said: "We realize they are only the beginning, possibly, of a long series of petty and larger prosecutions.

Morris Watson Speaks

"We understand . . . there will probably not be a repetition of the red days that characterized the Palmer days on any widespread scale . . . There will be instead an attempt to behead the party, an attempt to harass it, an attempt to bleed it financially while admitting the legal right of the Communist Party to exist." She inferred that attempts would be made to force the party to divulge its membership, "so that a blacklist may be set up in the big industrial centers of the United States of America," she said.

Morris Watson, vice president of the American Newspaper Guild, said "there isn't any question in my mind that the attacks on the Communist Party, the persecution of the Communist Party, are merely forerunners to the break-up of all minority parties.

"It so happens at the moment that they are not persecuting the American Labor Party or persecuting the progressive wing of the American Labor Party because they are afraid to at the moment. American labor—they are afraid to attack that very name," he said. Watson was introduced as being a member of the American Labor Party.

D. C. Unable To Fill Lot, Official Says

Remedy for Hole On Albemarle Street Up to Owners, Whitehurst Asserts

Cleaning up of a sunken vacant lot in the 3700 block of Albemarle street northwest, denounced in the neighborhood as a health menace, is "incumbent" on owners of the property, not the District government, Capt. H. C. Whitehurst, director of highways, declared last night.

Since April, 1938, householders have urged construction by the District of a drainage alley or regrading of the lot which is littered with trash and partly inundated with stagnant water. After two years of official buck-passing the situation has yet to be remedied although the Health Department recommended building of a drainage alley.

Regrading Held Solution

Commenting on the dispute last night, Capt. Whitehurst declared: "The District can't go in on private property, even if it wanted to. We are not authorized to spend Government money on private land."

The only solution to the problem of the lot, where recently the 4-year-old daughter of a neighbor was rescued after falling into the stagnant pool, is regrading, Whitehurst said.

This would have to be done by filling in the entire lot so as to bring it up to the level of Albemarle street. A drainage alley would not be feasible since the land is below street level, he asserted.

Free Filling Possible

"It doesn't take an engineer to see that," Whitehurst declared. He added, "I can't conceive why it was suggested," referring to the Health Department's recommendation.

Whitehurst said property owners could probably get the filling done free, explaining the realty concerns building in the neighborhood would be glad to dump their superfluous materials in the depression.

"Apparently, the people (property owners) are not interested," Whitehurst added.

Of the three owners of the lot one lives in Switzerland, another in Takoma Park, Md. Only one resides now in the District.

Leigh and Olivier Are Latest for Fund Benefit

Daniel Frohman Adds Stars to May 5 Bill; Earle Announces May Screen Features; This, That and the Other About the Theater

THE WEEK-END'S most important announcement—phoned to this desk by Sue Seymour Cooke, in charge of the local office for the event, just in time to miss last week's last column—was that Vivien Leigh and Laurence Olivier will come to town on Sunday night, May 5, to present the balcony scene from their production of Shakespeare's "Romeo and Juliet" as one of the major features of the Actors Fund Benefit, to be presented in the National Theater by the venerable Daniel Frohman, president of the Actors Fund of America.

BELL

It is hardly necessary to recall that Miss Leigh was the Scarlett O'Hara in "Gone With the Wind" or that she also currently is appearing with Charles Laughton in "Sidewalks of London." It is equally superfluous to offer the reminder that Mr. Olivier is the Max De Winter in "Rebecca," now at the Palace, was the male star of "Wuthering Heights" and was the first to appear opposite Katharine Cornell on the stage in S. N. Behrman's "No Time for Comedy," the role in which he was succeeded by Francis Lederer.

Miss Leigh and Mr. Olivier proferred their services to the Actors Fund between their Chicago and New York engagements in Shakespeare's classic love tragedy. Their presence on the benefit bill should insure its universal appeal to all ages and classes of theatergoers.

These luminaries, of course, are not the only ones who will be present in the National the night of May 5. The commitment of his current vehicle, Ernest Hemingway's "The Fifth Column," to a New York benefit on the same night has eliminated Franchot Tone from the list of Uncle Dan's visiting stars, but his place has been promptly filled by Dennis King, singing-actor, last seen semi-locally in "Petticoat Fever" at the Olney Theater last summer. Others whose presence is assured include Monty Woolley, star of the Eastern company of "The Man Who Came to Dinner;" Walter Huston, appearing with Jessie Royce Landis in Saroyan's "Love's Old Sweet Song;" Jack Haley, last seen as the Tin Woodman in "The Wizard of Oz;" Sheila Barrett and Gladys Swarthout, operatic star of both stage and screen, and her husband, Frank Chapman. Miss Swarthout and Mr. Chapman are planing in from Oxford, Miss., to take part in the benefit performance. Other distinguished names will be added to the list during the ensuing fortnight.

Having completed a "Spring Parade" of seven outstanding screen attractions, the Earle Theater now announces its "Merry-Month-of-May Hits." Heading the May line of march—if you can do with a garbled calendar—will be John Wayne and Claire Trevor, stars of "Stagecoach," and Walter Pidgeon, in "Dark Command," scheduled for May 3. John Garfield and Anne Shirley are the stars of "Saturday's Children," due on Thirteenth street May 10. Third in the line-up is "Typhoon," romantic drama of the Dutch East Indies, with Dorothy Lamour and Robert Preston—in Technicolor, by the way. "All This and Heaven Too" will bring Bette Davis and Charles Boyer to the Earle as the fourth May hit.

Horace Heidt and His Musical Knights are having a tough time trying to empty that "Pot of Gold" at Loew's Capitol Theater. Through Saturday night no one whose phone number was called was in the audience to claim the $100 that would have been his—or hers—present "in the flesh." It was estimated that by today the first lucky member of the audience who can answer to his phone number—and prove it—will receive something like $400, instead of $100. The amount piles up as claimants fail to appear. Anyhow, someone tonight will walk out of the Capitol with at least a "yard" of real dough. If the phone business still doesn't work, Horace has figured out another way to get poor that will.

Dots and Dashes

In preparation for the opening of the season, the Roadside Theater will hold tryouts for its acting companies in Room 200, School of Government, G. W. U., Twenty-first and G streets, on Wednesday and Thursday nights of this week, at 7:30 p. m. . . . Ann Corio, star of this week's revusical at the Gayety, has been signed for the lead in Paul Burton-Mercur's "Love Is No Heaven," tried out two seasons ago and since rewritten . . . Due to the heavy demand for seats, it already is announced that Hedy Lamarr in "Ecstasy" will be held over, beginning Wednesday, for a second week at the Belasco . . . "Lights Out in Europe" will open May 1 . . . Jacquilinn Brundage, Falls Church, Va., a graduate of George Vivian's Academy of the Theater, has signed a year's contract with United Artists to appear with Mary Pickford and another one to play ingenues at Skowhegan, Me., this summer . . . Her stage name hereafter will be "Louise Corday," suggested by Miss Pickford . . . Mickey Rooney in "Young Tom Edison" is packing 'em in at the Columbia's repeater.

In Hollywood

With Hedda Hopper

Hollywood, April 21.

Now that Daphne Fairbanks has arrived, no fear of the film dynasties dying out; besides the Bennetts, Costellos and Barrymores, there are over 300 youngsters of famous parents in Hollywood—actors, directors, assistants, cutters—all keeping bright the family name. Sons of film presidents are learning from the ground up. They are Jack Warner, jr.; George Schaeffer, jr., son of RKO's president; and Douglas Yates, cutter, at Republic. Wally Reid, jr., and Lon Chaney, jr., both acting in "Northwest Mounted." Then there's Bryant Washburn, jr., Jack Mulhall, jr., Edward Arnold, jr., Tyrone Power, and Jack Holt's son, Tim.

Producer Eric Pommer's son, John, works as an assistant. Fred Niblo's son scripted "The Fighting 69th." Director Irving Cummings' son, Irving, jr., is writing. Noah Beery, jr., is working with Uncle Wally—15 children in the Quillan family (all in our business); Walter Huston's son, John (a writer); Phillips Holmes, son of Taylor; Carl Laemmle, jr.

David Selznick's and Darryl Zanuck's sons are still too small . . . Topping everything . . . three sons of three famous fathers are working together on "The Villain Still Pursued Her" . . . Elbert Franklin, son of H. B. Franklin; Vaughan Paul, son of Val Paul; Eddie Montaigne, jr., is second assistant director. Eddie is the son of Eddie Montaigne, Paramount.

Nice to know Grant Mitchell has signed for three pictures with Warners and has an important part in "Episode" with Jeffrey Lynn and Olivia de Havilland. Now that Ann Sheridan has clicked in a big way in "It All Came True" some people are suggesting they make a lady out of her. Why? She's the perfect Jean Harlow type; why change that style?

After all we've had Clara now as the "It" girl, Jean Harlow and now Ann. You never heard of Bette Davis insisting she wanted to be a lady on the screen and yet she has the most enviable position in town. Everyone on the Warner lot wants to play a part in the Knute Rockne picture. Never has been such co-operation—there was a man!

Sprigg Cleaning, maybe. For the man who is moving the Walt Disney studios to its new home is Rodney S. Sprigg. A Hollywood figure for 20 years. Did I say a move? Rodney tells me if the time were figured consecutively it would take 16 men, eight hours a day, two weeks to move the 1,200 people concerned. But that isn't all. They go department after department. Already 100 loads have gone, there are 50 more.

The Toughest Guy Gets Him a Key

as Verne, the craftiest prisoner in the Guiana penal colony, manages to join the jail break, despite a deterring and treacherous clout on the head by one of his "pals." This happens in "Strange Cargo," following "Rebecca" on the screen at Loew's Palace. Joan Crawford is Mr. Gable's costar in this Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer thrill-drama of rough stuff and regeneration

The New Yorker

By Leonard Lyons

New York, April 21.

FASHIONS DEPARTMENT: Jim Tully, who arived in New York a few days ago, was invited to dine at the home of Mack Kriendler, of the 21 Club. Tully had an excellent dinner, with excellent wine, and supplied excellent conversation . . . After this very pleasant evening at home, Tully thanked his host and departed. He decided before retiring to have a night-cap and went to the Kriendler's 21 Club—where he was stopped at the door because he wasn't wearing a tie. "T'hell with you," said Tully, as he left, "if you think more of a tie than you do of people."

MUSIC DEPARTMENT: Dave Dennis is the new bandleader, now working at Dempsey's Broadway. His music is first-rate, and so the cafe is crowded. Music publishers and song pluggers, who usually frequent these places to induce bandleaders to play their tunes, are there exerting their influence so that Dennis will NOT play their songs . . . Dennis can play them as well as the others can. But he broadcasts, coast-to-coast, at 1 a. m., five times a week. When he plays a song and clears it with ASCAP, it means that no other orchestra may play that tune two hours earlier or two hours later. It also means that the better known bands—Benny Goodman's, Glenn Miller's, Tommy Dorsey's, etc.—who broadcast during that period, may not play that same song.

MOVIES DEPARTMENT: Keenan Wynn is a steady patron of the Miami Theater on Sixth avenue, where the old silent films are being shown . . . Yesterday he asked to see the proprietor. "Is it possible for you to get a movie in which Frank Keenan appeared?" . . . "Yes, I think so," the manager answered. "But why Frank Keenan?" . . . "I'm his grandson," Wynn explained. "And I never saw him act" . . . Within the next few days a movie, in which the late Frank Keenan was starred, will be shown at the Miami Theater.

DRAMA DEPARTMENT: Kermit Bloomgarden, who produced Albert Bein's "Heavenly Express," is the business manager for Herman Shumlin. He succeeded Bein in that job . . . When Shumlin produced "Children's Hour," Bein was unable to get any indemnity company to give him a bond—because Bein once served time in Missouri, where he was convicted of bank robbery. Shumlin furnished the bond for him . . . At the end of the first week, the producer found his business manager pouring over the accounts—and confessing that they were $12,000 short. "But it's impossible," Shumlin told the distraught Bein. "The gross was only $14,000." Item, by item they rechecked the accounts, and found that Bein had miscalculated. The shortage was only $1.20.

FINANCE DEPARTMENT: Phil Silvers, the burlesque comic who was signed by M-G-M, is working in the movie adaptation of "Strike Up the Band," and then will appear in the next Mickey Rooney-Judy Garland film . . . His friend, Artie Shaw, returned to Hollywood last week, and asked Silvers: "Phil, how do you like it out here?" . . . "It's swell," sighed the former Minsky employe, "It's a great feeling—for the first time to be getting more money than Ann Corio."

SOCIAL NOTES: When Eddie Cantor's new movie, "Forty Little Mothers," had its premiere last week at Loew's Canal Street, arrangements were made for a group of East Side mothers to present a bouquet of flowers to Ida Cantor—who had been courted by Eddie when they both lived in that neighborhood . . . After the movie was shown, the mothers committee mounted the stage, where the celebrities had congregated, to present that bouquet marked "To Ida." But they never before had seen Ida Cantor. They presented it to the one they thought was Mrs. Cantor—Mrs. Lois Andrew Jessel.

Beauty Returns

ANN CORIO,

the most beautiful girl in burlesque, who returns to the stage of the Gayety Theater this week to star in her own production of "Girls in Blue"

Baseball Tops War Abroad At Trans-Lux

American Sports Events And Politics Compete With Battle Fronts

While the Trans-Lux Theater, for the current week's show, naturally boasts the latest films from Europe, it remains for king baseball to run away with the 75 minutes of entertainment. After President Roosevelt starts the game at Washington there follow shots of the Athletic-Yankees and the Phillies-Giants.

In the theater of war, all phases are covered from the Belgian coast defenses, complete mobilization of Holland, scenes of Denmark just prior to the Nazi blow, to the Italian fleet in action and first Canadian troops to arrive in Norway. The Balkan countries are shown on the alert, and King George bids good-by to more of his troops. Also are fine pictures of Winston Churchill inspecting shipyards; picturesque French Alpine troops, the Sultan of Morocco and Gen. Franco observing the first anniversary of the fall of Madrid.

In our Capital city are the cherry blossoms in bloom; President Roosevelt addressing the Pan American Union, and Chief Justice Hughes observing his seventieth birthday.

The "March of Time" brings to the screen "Canada at War." Music lovers will be thrilled by the fine playing of the National Philharmonic Orchestra as Frederick Feher conducts. The cartoon of the week is a color rhapsody "The Greyhound and the Rabbit."

Metropolitan

Over the week-end, "Road to Singapore" enjoyed its third down town. The likeable Bing Crosby-Bob Hope-Dorothy Lamour film is being continued at the Metropolitan through Thursday evening.

In this light and refreshing frolic of two young men who become afraid of "civilized" women and their disconcerting allurements, Hope and Crosby are very well paired. With that geniality common to them both, they make their comedy and songs distinctly spontaneous. A life of wealthy ease looks awesome to them and they zoom across the Pacific—south to Kaigoon, where they manage to exist pleasantly without doing too much work. Dorothy Lamour comes to live with them (!) but while both are enamored of her, they do maintain their enviable balance.

"Road to Singapore," then, is a merry, jestful matter which will make war and rumors of war seem pleasantly distant.

Howard

Rhythm reigns behind the footlights at the Howard Theater this week, with "Fats" Waller, his organ and his 13-piece orchestra ruling as the royalty of swingdom. The "Swingtime in Springtime" revue proves to be a speedy and colorful array of fast-stepping entertainment.

Starting with the warmer brands of musical favorites, "Tuxedo Junction" and "Feet's Too Big," he wins approval from the swing fans; thence into his quieter mood he registers solidly with his own "Honeysuckle Rose," "Indian Summer" and "St. Louis Blues." Mae Diggs, vocalist, clicks nicely with "Daddy" and "I Oughta Dance."

Bright lights in the revue are Candy and Pepper, a dynamic dance duo; the syncopated soubrette, Edna Mae Harris; Moke and Poke, a couple of fugitive rugcutters, and Mason and Vigal, who are still grabbing the laughs after a full season at this showshop.

On the screen, Barton MacLane is cofeatured with John Litel and Rochelle Hudson in "Men Without Souls," which has prison walls as a background. The emotional conflict makes a vivid, highly dramatic film tale.

Gayety

Ann Corio, burlesque's outstanding attraction and one of the most beautiful girls in show business today, is the four-star offering at the Gayety Theater this week.

There is little we can add to what has already been said about this lovely personality. Onn's looks, figure and wardrobe speak far better for themselves. Incidentally, the creations worn by Miss Dorio in the current production are something the femmes will be sure to rave about.

Jack Diamond and "Slats" Taylor, two witty chaps, handle the comedy situations and do an excellent job with rather ordinary material. Diamond, in particular, is unusually funny in the current revue. Charlie Schultz and Ethel DeVeaux render capable assistance in the many skits in which they appear.

One of the best things on the bill is the acrobatic dancing of Levy Stacy. How she accomplishes several of the torso-twisting numbers remains a mystery to us, but nevertheless Levy's routines rate with the best seen at this house.

On the distaff side, the musical specialties of Mickey Dennis and Ermine Parker prove outstanding while the "ladies of the ensemble," led by petite Pat Kelly, are seen to advantage in many colorful ballet and posing numbers. The fine voice of Jimmy Cavanaugh, by the way, enhances many of these interludes.

ART JOHN.

Atlas

Robert Bell's "Hawaiian Follies," which yesterday opened a three-day engagement at the Atlas Theater, provided a delightful interval of swaying palms, rhythmic dances and melodious songs when they presented their 1940 edition of the original "Follies" production.

Neki La Maka, shapely Hawaiian dancer, does a rumba to the rhythm of Waikiki's steel guitar band to thunderous applause. The band swings out to the "Beer Barrel Polka" and does a great job, with a few encores of present-day hits. Kana Loki performs the island's newest version of the Hula-Hula. John Hookona's tenor voice stops the show. Bell himself does a smooth job as master of ceremonies.

The double-fetaure screen attraction is comprised of Alice Faye and Fred MacMurray, in "Little Old New York," and Wayne Morris, in "Double Alibi."

Louella O. Parsons

Close-Ups and Long-Shots Of the Motion Picture Scene

Hollywood, April 21 (INS).—Wee Bonnie Baker, the little girl who put over the song "Oh, Johnnie, Oh, Johnnie, How You Can Love" on the radio and in leading cafes throughout the country, is coming to Hollywood. She and Orin Tucker, the orchestra leader, who discovered her, and with whose band she sings those amusing songs in her funny little voice, has been signed by Paramount. Bonnie is hardly 5 feet tall and she makes a hit with everyone who hears her warble.

LOUELLA PARSONS

When she was at the Mark Hopkins in San Francisco you couldn't get in and the same thing happened at the Palmer House in Chicago. Bonnie has a great personality and ought to photograph well.

Technicolor today made a gesture to help the economic situation in motion pictures by voluntarily reducing the price of film 1 cent per foot, effective August 1. This may not sound like a lot of money to those on the outside but it actually means a saving of $35,000 on a feature film. This move was made even though the company has contracts for 28 features and many shorts. Technicolor, as it stands now, is expensive so that with the war cutting off the market it might later have been imperative for the industry to economize with color. The loss of the Scandinavian countries was a fresh blow to the industry, although it has been proved that good pictures will make so much money in America that the foreign markets are not absolutely necessary.

The squawk that Jack Warner made when I mentioned that Bette Davis might be loaned to Sam Goldwyn could have been mistaken for a British gun in the Narvik Harbor. Jack said he would never loan Bette Davis—yet today I heard that in return for Gary Cooper in "The Life of John Doe," the Frank Capra picture, Sam was demanding his pound of flesh in the person of Bette Davis for "The Little Foxes." Certainly there is no actress who could play the Tallulah Bankhead role better than Bette, but will Jack lend her? I'd say not. Warners have so much Bette Davis material piled up. I don't see how she could be spared that long. Yet Sam is asking.

Snapshots of Hollywood collected at random: Stanley Cortez, Ricardo's brother and a Cameraman at Universal, and Mildred Rehn, Viennese actress, were secretly wed in Tia Juana 18 months ago. Now they're flying to Las Vegas to retie the knot; Groucho Marx was taken sick last week and had to be taken home; Johnny Weissmuller, Bing Crosby and Humphrey Bogart, week-ended at Catalina to attend the Bobby Jones golf tournament; George Stone and his six-foot sweetie, Geraldine Ross, of the Florentine Gardens, have said adieu to romance—at least to theirs; between editions Eddie and Rita Loew kissed and made up.

Ann Sheridan is back from Palm Sphings and so is George Brent; Marlene Dietrich, stunning in all black and a hat with paradise feathers, dining with Eric Remarque at Ciro's; the Danny Dankers, the Jules Steins and this writer and her favorite doctor there on cook's night out. Also Julie and George Murphy, Alice Faye and Sandy Cummings, William Haines and Mrs. Dick Foran; Errol Flynn worked until midnight last Friday so he could leave for the Gaudalupe Islands, in Mexico, and attend the races there. He will be accompanied by Johhny Myers, his pal, Bud Ernst, Gwynn Pickford's husband, and Clyde Cook, well known comedian.

May Robson, 76 years young last Friday, was guest of honor at a luncheon given her by Paramount. May was having more fun after the preview of "Irene" than any one at the Party which RKO gave; Bette Davis leaves for Honolulu Wednesday and Saturday night gave a farewell party to the cast and crew of "All This and Heaven, Too" at the Victor Hugo; Mary Martin and Bob Oliver a Hollywood tropics dinner twosome.

That's all for today. See you tomorrow!

16 WASHINGTON: MONDAY, APRIL 22, 1940 X*

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

New York, April 21.—The suspicion in New York is that mutuel betting, like the gasoline buggy, is here to stay. The State has already reaped $150,000 in six days of racing and is booting itself for not having tapped this convenient source of revenue many long years ago.

POVICH

Jamaica track, first of the New York courses to operate under the new mutuel law, has been a terrific eye-opener. In 34 days of racing last year, Jamaica returned $118,000 to the State in taxes on a flat-rate daily basis. During the first five days of racing at Jamaica this month, with the State taking a 5 per cent cut of all money that passes through the newly-legalized betting machines, Jamaica dished up $128,000 to the Commonwealth.

New York isn't going to get the $10,000,000 annual revenue from racing that Senator Dunnigan promised when he led the fight for the mutuels in the State Legislature, but New York is going to get $5,000,000 unless all signs fail. When the popular Belmont and Saratoga tracks swing into action, the State anticipates a daily "take" of $50,000.

Where is all the dough coming from? From John Q. Public, of course. The millions the State will get isn't largesse from the tracks. The customers are paying the freight. How long will they hold out? Well, they've never tired of the mutuels in any other betting community.

Consider what happens to the race fan's dollar when it is poured into the machines. Assume that $10,000 is bet on the first race of a seven-race card. Of that, only $9,000 is returned to the players. The State and the track have each taken 5 per cent. When that $9,000 is bet on the second race, only $8,100 comes back to the players. Repeat that formula through a seven-race card. At the end of the day's racing, the customers' $10,000 has shrunk to approximately $4,800.

We haven't made any allowance for what the track calls "breakage," either. Under the law, the track is entitled to retain the odd pennies and pay off to the nearest nickel. Those odd pennies constitute no mean sum. In fact, on the opening day of racing at Jamaica, the track dragged won $6,400 in odd pennies. "Breakage" amounted to 1 per cent of the entire day's betting.

Thus far, New York is cashing in only on the regular customers—the folks who were betting even when the bookies were the mediums—but the racing fever will spread. It will perk up considerably when they start hanging box car numbers on the pay-odd board and thus intrigue the laiety. Thus far the biggest pay-off has been a $44 mutuel. At the first $100 mutuel, which is due any day now, the garment trade, the house maids, the store clerks and the man on the street will storm the track.

That $44 mutuel was returned, incidentally, by a nag named Ken's Pop and yesterday at Jamaica they were telling the story of how one woman accidentally cashed in on the long-shot. Unfamiliar with the new-fangled mutuel machines, she approached the ticket window prepared to buy a ticket on the favorite.

"I want one ——"

Before she could finish her request, the busy ticket-seller pressed a button and the machine spouted out a ticket on No. 1. She protested that she was asking for "One ticket on No. 5," but the long line of fans crowded her away from the window before an exchange could be made. While she was complaining to the complaint department, No. 1 was winning the race at 21 to 1 odds, whereupon she decided she'd keep the ticket.

New York's merchants, its baseball club owners and the banks are complaining about the mutuel law even as the business men are doing in California and New England. In Los Angeles, according to reports, savings accounts have diminished 25 per cent since the mutuels were installed. In Boston and Providence, race betting is raising hob with stores carrying large installment accounts. But in each case the State has had a taste of the easy money and there is no possibility that the racing laws will be rescinded.

In New York, the baseball men are particularly alarmed at the possible effects of the new popularity of racing on baseball attendance. The Yankees and Giants staged their opening games last week to the smallest crowds of the last 20 years. The New York tracks stage racing all summer in direct competition with the baseball parks. In Washington, Clark Griffith has no such bad luck. Maryland tracks quit in May and do not operate again until September.

On the Line

With CONSIDINE

New York, April 21.—The average $2 horse bettor gives little or no thought to the subject of breeding, but to a major share of the "regulars," as they call themselves, it is the most fascinating side of the game.

CONSIDINE

The big furore in horse breeding circles today is the report that someone is at last going to try to inbreed the Fair Play line, which is more commonly known as the Man o' War line. In other words Man o' War will be mated with one of his fillies. Or brothers and sisters by Man o' War, will be mated. The King Ranch stables is said to be taking the lead in what some horsemen believe is a risky step.

Nelson Dunstan, the country's foremost authority on thoroughbred breeding, has advised against the fusion of Man o' War stock with other Man o' War stock. But he thinks that inbreeding has long since justified itself in other strains. Some horsemen actually have studied the case histories of the inhabitants of Pitcairn island, where for several centuries the descendants of the mutineers from the bounty have married and inter-married. There has been only one era of physical deterioration, but it passed on and today the Fletcher Christians and the Youngs and the others are sound of mind and body. Only their teeth are sub-normal, but that may be of dietary origin.

Breeders long since have imbred the Domino and Ben Brush lines, two of the three great American lines. The Domino line is known for its great speed. The Ben Brush line combines speed with ability to run a fair distance. The Fair Play, or Man o' War line is known for its durability. Hence there has never been much reason for trying to get super-durability by mating durability with durability because we no longer have any distance racing in America. The richest plums of racing are plucked in races between seven furlongs and a mile and a quarter. There are no stakes beyond that latter distance worth breeding (or inbreeding) for. But there is another reason why the breeders have hesitated. The Fair Play line is a wild, ungovernable strain which produced such abominable post actors as Man o' War, Hard Tack and War Admiral. It is feared that inbreeding that strain will produce a colt with all the sins of his forbears doubled and redoubled in his hide. The Domino and Ben Brush lines are placid lines and more amenable to inter-marriage.

Curiously enough, breeders who go in for inbreeding of lines never expect to get a super-racer out of the unions. What they principally have in mind is getting a fine stallion or a good mare which in turn can be mated with non-relations and produce fine racers. For instance, the great sire Ultimus was the result of inbreeding the Domino line. He never raced. But he produced High Time and other fine speedsters.

Hardly have the echoes of Bo Russell's famed placekick-that-missed died down, than a new and just as fiery debate arises. The townships of New York and Washington always seem to run into umpire and referee trouble when their athletic teams meet. The debate over Russell's placekick in the Giants-Redskins game plunged big league pro football into violent discord. Well, to get to the point, in the opening game of the season between the Yankees and Senators—first inning—Joe Gordon hit a long fly into the leftfield stands. Umpire Rue called it fair (which gave the Yanks their eventual edge.) He probably rued the day he decided that, because Bucky Harris tried to climb down his throat, just as Ray Flaherty, the Redskin coach, tried to get at Bill Halloran in the football classic.

P. S. Both decisions stuck.

Navy Yawlers Defeat Two Foes

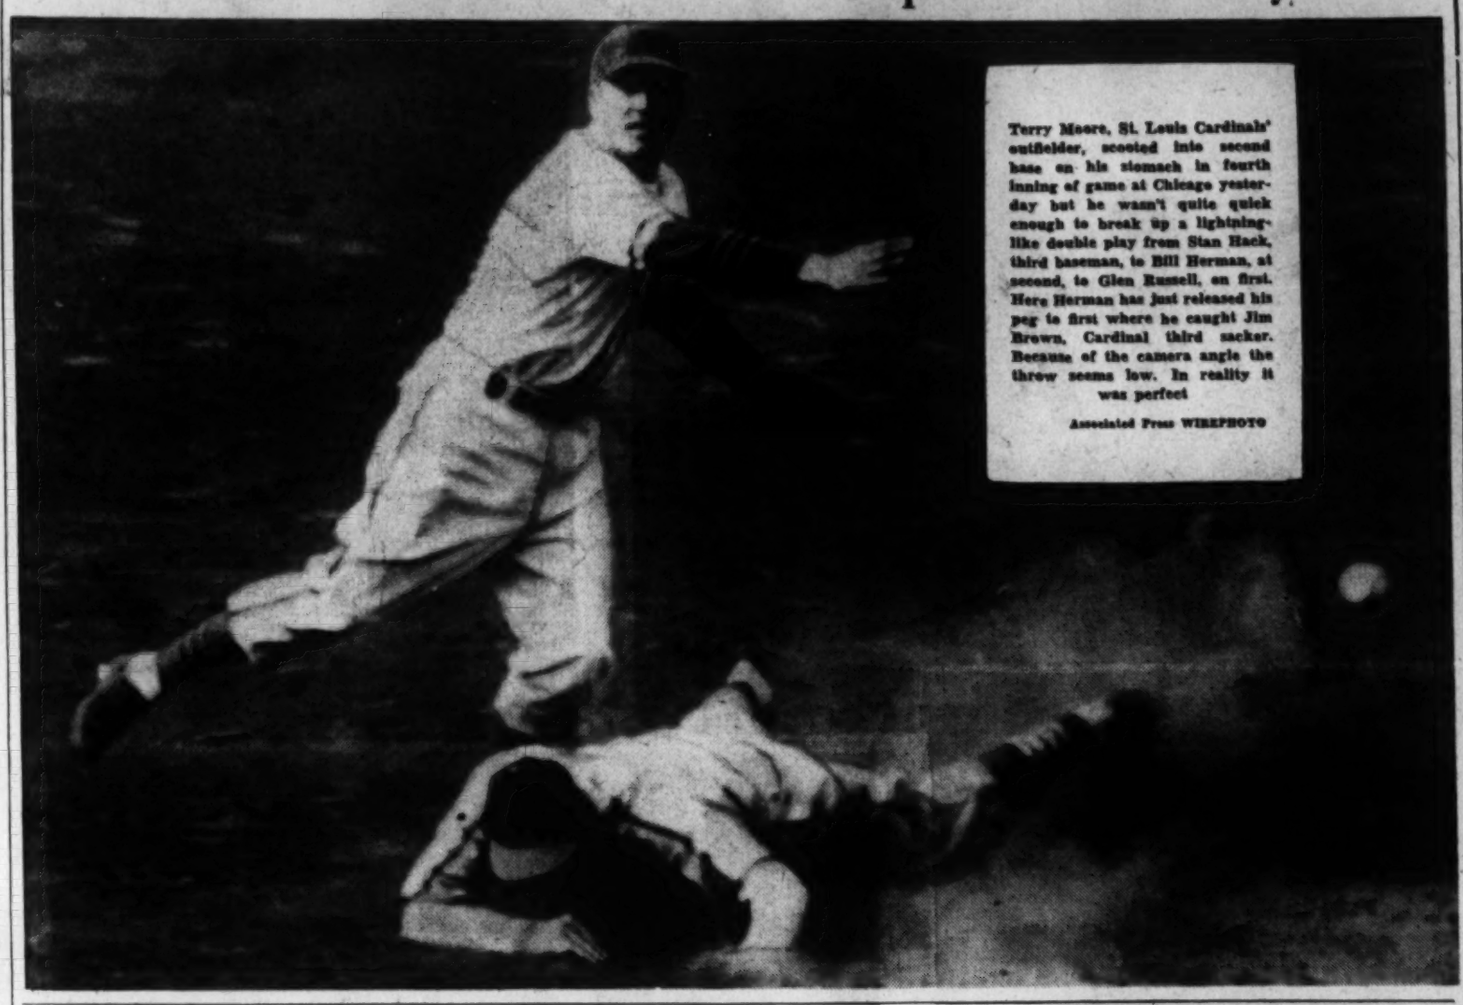
Annapolis, April 21 (U.P.).—Sailing into the teeth of a near-gale, the Naval Academy won a 40-foot yawl race today from Princeton and Massachusetts Institute of Technology.

The Navy boat, with Midshipman John J. McMullen as skipper, finished first with an elapsed time of 3 hours, 20 minutes, 35 seconds, to nip Princeton, which trailed all the way over the 18¼-mile course, by a mere 25 seconds. M. I. T. was time in 3 hours, 34:30 minutes.

The seven-man crews raced in the Naval Academy yawls Resolute, Alert and Intrepid, drawing lots for the choice of the identical boats.

Although Chesapeake Bay was rough, the veteran Princeton crew risked using a parachute spinnaker to gain on Navy, but had to hawl it down midway.

Card's Stomach Slide Fails to Break Up Cubs' Double Play



Terry Moore, St. Louis Cardinals' outfielder, scooted into second base on his stomach in fourth inning of game at Chicago yesterday but he wasn't quite quick enough to break up a lightning-like double play from Stan Hack, third baseman, to Bill Herman, at second, to Glen Russell, on first. Here Herman has just released his peg to first where he caught Jim Brown, Cardinal third sacker. Because of the camera angle the throw seems low. In reality it was perfect

Cardinals Shell Dean, Defeat Cubs, 5 to 4

Dizzy Chased in Fifth After Restricting Former Mates to 1 Hit in First Three Innings; 22,338 See St. Louis Score Victory, Using 5 Pitchers

By the Associated Press

Chicago, April 21.—The Chicago Cubs unveiled the once-great Dizzy Dean for the benefit of 22,338 spectators today and nothing could have suited the St. Louis Cardinals better.

Dean's one-time teammates hopped on his slow curves for six hits in the fourth and fifth innings for a total of five runs, sufficient to whip the Cubs, 5 to 4, for the St. Louis clan's initial victory of the season.

Dizzy had the fans buzzing with his "nothing" ball in the first three frames when he yielded only one hit and no runs. In the fourth, however, Bob Sturgeon erred on a ground ball, Enos Slaughter and Johnny Mize singled and an error by Glen Russell gave the Cards two runs to tie the score.

Dean was sent to the showers in the fifth unhampered by any erring teammates, singles by Max Lanier, Stu Martin, Mize and Don Padgett bringing in Charley Root as the new pitcher. Pepper Martin greeted the Veteran Root with a single, accounting for three more runs for the inning.

Rookies Ken Raffensberger and Verne Olsen blanked the Cards after that, but the Cubs were unable to wipe out their three-run deficit against the five pitchers the Cards used.

The Cubs added one in the sixth and another in the eighth on Al Todd's second double and third hit and singles by Stan Hack and Bill Herman. They threatened again in the ninth when Hank Leiber survived on Jim Brown's high throw and a pass and sacrifice advanced the tying and winning runs into scoring position.

Mort Cooper rushed in as the fifth Card hurler. Clay Bryant, running for Leiber, was tossed out at the plate on Todd's grounder, and Billy Rogell, Sturgeon's successor at short, popped to Brown for the final out.

Gas Light Bowling Winners Get Awards

Prizes and trophies to winners in the Washington Gas Light Co. mixed bowling league will be awarded players at Recreation alleys on Thursday night. President R. C. Owers will make the presentations.

Catherine Pitts and E. O. Schweigert won the pennant, with Jerry O'Neil and R. A. Lyon in second place.

Budge Wins North-South Tennis Title

Dick Skeen Beaten In Finals; Barnes, Budge Take Doubles

By the United Press

Pinehurst, N. C., April 21.—Red-haired Don Budge defeated Dick Skeen, a fellow Californian, to win the singles title in the annual North and South professional tennis tournament here today, then paired with Bruce Barnes, Austin, Tex., to take first money in the doubles.

Skeen, who hails from Los Angeles, went down before Budge's terrific onslaught in straight sets, 6—0, 6—3, 6—0.

In the doubles Budge and Barnes defeated Skeen and John Faunce, also of Los Angeles, 6—4, 6—0, 7—5.

In the semi-finals of the doubles match, Skeen and Faunce were tied with Lloyd Budge and John Hendrix, both of Chicago, at two sets apiece when the match was called on account of darkness yesterday. In the playoff early today Skeen and Faunce won the deciding set, with the final score at 6—2, 3—6, 10—12, 6—1, 13—11.

American Grid Loop Heads Named

Cincinnati, April 21 (AP).—The American Professional Football League today reelected George J. Heitzler and James C. Hogan, president and secretary-treasurer, respectively, and rejected a franchise application from Miami, Fla., on the ground that city is too far from others having teams in the circuit.

Action on applications from Ashland, Ky., and Kansas City was deferred until June 2.

The Columbus Bullies, 1939 champions, announced at the meeting they had traded Regis Monahan, former Detroit Lions star, to the new Milwaukee club for three players as yet unnamed.

Grant Bows To Bob Riggs In Net Finals

Bitsy Helpless in River Oakes Play; Mrs. Fabyan Wins

By the Associated Press

Houston, Tex., April 21.—Bobby Riggs, stealing catlike across court to engineer tremendous baseline shots, ran Bitsy Grant into the ground today in the finals of the River Oaks tennis tournament, 7—5, 6—3, 7—5.

Riggs drew Grant about as though the little Atlanta scrambler were a marionette, and ran out the straight set victory in an hour and a half.

Bitsy was helpless, and only his native refusal to give up enabled him to make a match of it. He tried for everything and successfully negotiated a score of "impossible" returns, but Riggs duplicated his efforts and then surpassed him in technique.

Mrs. Sarah Palfrey Fabyan, of Boston, No. 3 nationally, won the women's singles, defeating Mary Hardwick, English Wightman Cup player, 6—4, 5—7, 6—2.

The victory was revenge for defeats Mrs. Fabyan had suffered earlier this winter at Miss Hardwick's hands.

The first set of the women's singles singles was a see-saw business before Mrs. Fabyan broke service to win it. The Boston matron had a 5—4 lead in the second, but Miss Hardwick grabbed three straight games.

Mrs. Fabyan had little trouble in the last set.

Hollingsworth's Baby Escapes Injury in Crash

St. Louis, April 21 (U.P.).—The yet unnamed son of Al (Boots) Hollingsworth, Washington Senators pitcher, today left the hospital where he was born 12 days ago, became involved in an automobile accident and returned covered with coal dust but unscathed.

He was thrown from the arms of his mother when the car in which they were riding collided with a coal truck, which overturned. Mrs. Hollingsworth sustained a fractured shoulder blade and fractured ribs, and two daughters were slightly hurt, as was the driver, Miss Marguerite McGowan, a sister of Mrs. Hollingsworth.

The baby was found to be uninjured after hospital attendants washed off the coal dust.

Sparta Soccermen Win

Chicago, April 21 (AP).—The Sparta Falstaff soccer team of Chicago won the Western Division championship today with a hard-earned 1-0 victory over the Morgan Sports Club, of Pittsburgh.

Maki Runs Slow 3 Miles But Beats Lash Easily

By the Associated Press

New Orleans, April 21.—Taisto Maki, of Finland, finding Dixie's sun too strong and Indiana's Don Lash too weak, ran three miles here today in the disappointing time of 14 minutes, 10.4 seconds, 28 seconds off his own world's record that he had hoped to beat.

The Finnish ski trooper finished 150 yards ahead of the Indiana policeman, the only other entrant in the Finnish Relief Fund performances. It was Maki's first outdoor appearance in the United States.

In a prelude to the match, the immortal Paavo Nurmi, Maki's friend and coach, ran a half-mile exhibition and said it was probably the last time he would ever run in America, and possibly on any track.

Rained Out in N. Y., Nats Play Sox Today

Leonard Will Pitch Opener of 3-Game Series, With Haynes and Hudson to Follow; Harris Rebuked but Not Suspended by League Head

By Shirley Povich
Post Staff Writer

New York, April 21.—The Nats today held their own, such as it is, when one of New York's most unrelenting rains forced the second straight postponement of Yankee Stadium activities. Late in the afternoon, the Washington club entrained for Boston and a three-game series with the Red Sox, starting tomorrow.

On the morrow, Washington's best bet to win a ball game—Dutch Leonard—will go to the mound against the Red Sox. Beaten, 1 to 0, by the Boston club in the season's inaugural, Leonard will not be facing Lefty Grove again tomorrow. His pitching opponent probably will be Woody Rich.

As the Nats move into Boston, Bucky Harris is abandoning the left-handed pitching program he had prepared against the Yankees. Three Washington southpaws were being reserved for the Yankee series, but against the Red Sox Harris will send a complete set of right-handed pitchers.

Haynes Will Work

Joe Haynes will make his first start of the season in the second game at Boston and in the final game Harris will send Rookie Sid Hudson to the mound as a gesture of confidence in the young right-hander who was beaten, 7-0, by Boston last week.

The Nats were not entirely happy about the two postponements in New York, despite the fact that they had been in a hitting slump. They recognized that their best chance of beating the Yankees was at a time when Joe DiMaggio was out of the New York lineup. DiMaggio, nursing a knee injury, will be available to the Yanks when next the Nats invade New York.

Bucky Harris is now definitely committed to his recent change in the Washington batting order which transposed the positions of Buddy Lewis and Jimmy Wasdell. Lewis moves up to the second spot formerly occupied by Wasdell, who now bats third.

Hit-and-Run Due

"Case and Lewis had such success as a hit-and-run combination last year that I don't want to disturb it," said Harris. "It is no reflection on Wasdell. Lewis simply is more apt to get a piece of the ball than Wasdell when Case is on the base paths. With Case on base, pitchers are going to be a bit disturbed and Lewis will draw a good many walks."

The season started a week ago,

Chicago Voted Into Big Ten Cage Schedule

Maroons Still Member Of Western Conference In Fact and Name

By the Associated Press

Chicago, April 21.—The University of Chicago still is a member of the Western Conference in fact as well as name.

Big Ten athletic directors, in a special meeting today, voted unanimously to include Chicago on their basketball schedules for the 1940-41 season, something they refused to do at the regular schedule meeting March 9.

At that meeting the directors said they were irked at Chicago because some of its officials had slurred other schools in the conference by saying a winning football team could not be produced without violating Big Ten regulations. The directors pointed out they took no exception to Chicago's withdrawal from intercollegiate football, regarding this as the school's private problem.

Asked to Give Proof

But the directors asked Chicago to either give concrete proof that conference schools were violating rules in developing football winners or apologize for the statement.

Robert M. Hutchins, Chicago's president and a caustic critic of big time football, said in a letter to the directors:

"On the subject of subsidization in the Big Ten I have said in public and private only this: To achieve the peculiar advantages of winning football, the University of Chicago must, under its conditions, subsidize players. The Intercollegiate Conference (Big Ten) has a sweeping rule forbidding subsidization. The university does not want winning football at the cost of violating that rule.'"

Acept Statement as Denial

The directors accepted Hutchins' statement as a denial of statements attributed to him charging other conference schools with recruiting and subsidizing athletes.

The athletic directors have the power to keep the Maroons from competing in any sport with any other conference school, which would virtually ostracize from the league. But only the faculty committee is empowered to expel the school from the circuit.

Further schedule making was deferred until the May meeting of the officials at Northwestern University during the outdoor track meet May 24-25. The directors' only other action was the awarding of the 1941 indoor track meet to Purdue University, February 28 and March 1.

Tribe's Star Knocked Out During Third

McCosky Leads Attack; Winners Get 5 Runs on 4 Hits; Tribe's First Loss

By the Associated Press

Cleveland, April 21.—The Detroit Tigers blasted Bob Feller from the mound with a five-run assault in the third inning today and set the Cleveland Indians down, 12 to 2, for the Tribe's first defeat of the season.

FELLER

Barney McCosky, first man to face the no-hit hero of last week, rapped out a double and scored on a two-bagger by Charley Gehringer.

Lynn (Schoolboy) Rowe, going the route for the Tigers, allowed only five hits. The Tigers, meanwhile, collected nine hits off three other Indian hurlers for a 15 total.

The fatal third gave the Tigers five runs on four hits—singles by Schoolboy Rowe, Dick Bartell and McCosky, and Bruce Campbell's double—coupled with two walks, a wild pitch and the hitting of Hank Greenberg by a pitched ball.

The Tigers got two more in the fourth as Harry Eisenstat relieved Feller, Rudy York tripling to score Gehringer and Greenberg. In the sixth, Detroit added another pair with a double by McCosky, a walk, double steal and Greenberg's single. Errors by Hal Trosky and Ray Mack in the eighth and last stanzas aided the Tigers to two more runs.

Trosky got the only home run of the day, in the seventh, Cleveland also scoring in the second as Mack drove in Jeff Heath, who had singled.

Ted Lyons Pitches Sox to 6-2 Victory

St. Louis, Mo., April 21 (INS).—Teddy Lyons set out on his eighteenth American League campaign this afternoon by pitching the Chicago White Sox to their first victory of the 1940 season, a 6-to-2 triumph over the St. Louis Browns.

The veteran knuckleballer allowed only seven hits as he chalked up the 222d victory of his long career. Five of the hits were bunched in the first two innings, when the Browns scored both their runs. Two of these were made by Rip Radcliff, traded to St. Louis by the Sox during the winter.

Behind Lyons, the Sox unleashed a 12-hit assault against George Coffman, who retired in the sixth. Johnny Whitehead and John Niggeling set down the last 11 Chicago hitters in order.

D. C. Colleges Have Real Chance for Four Penn Relay Titles

Blozis Seen As Winner Of 2 Events

Maryland 2-Mile Team Formidable; C. U. Likely to Win Mason-Dixon Mile

By Jack Munhall

Counting heavily on Georgetown's shot and discus ace, Al Blozis, and Maryland's crack 2-mile relay team, the District is cherishing hopes of achieving unprecedented success in the college division of the Penn Relay Carnival Friday and Saturday at Franklin Field, Philadelphia.

Georgetown and Maryland, fresh from successful indoor seasons, both will be represented in at least four events, while American University and Catholic University will round out the city's entries with teams in the Mason-Dixon Conference 1-mile relay championship.

With Blozis accounted a near-certainty to not only win the shot-put and discus, but to establish meet records for both events, the District contingent may bring home as many as three major titles, for the Terrapin 2-mile relayers have been established early favorites in their race.

C. U. Is Possibility

A fourth championship may come to the District from the Mason-Dixon 1-mile race, for Catholic is sending a very strong team. The Cardinal quartet, to be selected from among Leo Wall, John Corbett, John Doyle, John Weschler, Charles O'Keefe and Jim Milks is capable of bettering the existing Mason-Dixon record of 3:31.4.

Cardinal Coach Dorsey Griffith, who is far from an optimistic sort of soul, believes his team will run close to 3:28, an effort which almost surely would capture first place. The District will have one other entry in this race, a team from American University to be selected from among Jim Flaherty, Allen Hinkel, Bill Adams Cy Smith and LeRoy Cooke.

3 Hoya Teams Enter

Georgetown's entries in the forty-sixth annual carnival, other than Blozis will be varsity 1-mile and sprint medley teams and a freshman 1-mile quartet. Maryland will enter four and possibly five events. The Terps plan definitely to compete in the varsity 1-mile, 2-mile, sprint medley, and distance medley races, and perhaps in the 4-mile, depending on the physical condition of their small squad. In addition, Joe Murphy, Southern Conference sprint champion, will be in the Invitation 100.

Alan Miller and Kehoe are both scheduled to essay iron man roles for the Old Liners. Miller will anchor the mile team and lead off for the sprint medley, distance medley, and 2-mile foursomes. Kehoe Southern Conference indoor and outdoor champion, will anchor the 2-mile and sprint medley teams, run No. 1 for the distance medley team and No. 3 in the 4-mile race if Maryland decides to enter that event.

Personnel of Maryland's teams:

One mile—Murphy, Vernon Miller, Ochsenreiter, A. Miller.

Two miles—A. Miller, Fields, Chronister, Kehoe.

Sprint medley—A. Miller, 440; Ken Barnes and Murphy, 220, and Kehoe, half-mile.

Four mile—Bob Condon, Fields, Kehoe, Chronister (tentative lineup).

One mile—(Varsity) Morty Alnwick, Ken Lyden, Vinnie Braun and George Tucknett, with Bill Williams as alternative; (freshmen), Pete McAtee, Jim Fish, Johnny Doolan and Phil Graves, with Jim Hickey as alternative.

Sprint medley—Alnwick, Lyden, Braun and George Brogan.

Maryland's 1-mile relay entry is the same team which last year established a college class B outdoor record of 3:19.3 in winning in the Penn Relays.

Pitt Proves Unlucky In Relay Draws

Philadelphia, April 21 (AP).—The luck of the draw has gone against Pittsburgh's defending champions in four events in the annual Penn Relays.

The Panthers drew seventh position in the mile relay and twelfth in the sprint medley event. The draw for the 440 and 880 yard events, the other two events won by Pitt in 1939, will be made the day of the races.

Sandlot Giants Call Out Players

Manager Eddie Miller requests the following players of the Giants softball team to report for practice Friday at 5 p. m. at the Second and Hamilton northwest diamond: Erlich, Saunders, Roth, Mirman, Males, Sachon, White, Fried, Sirota, Sarkin, Fradin, Lebow and Shulman.

The Giants will begin play in the Sports Center League next Sunday at 11 o'clock on diamond No. 12 of the Monument lot.

Hank Missed Once

By the irony of fate, in Henry Picard's fine 1939 tournament record is the fact that he placed in the money in every event in which he played, save only the one at Hershey, Pa., over his own course. Coincidently, Felix Serafin, of Scranton, Pa., won the Hershey event, while Picard had previously won the Scranton Open on Serafin's course.

Grand National Steeplechase Entry Helps the Field but Not Himself

Jim Gipe's 75 Wins Play at Beaver Dam

A. M. Woodside, F. Thompson Tie for Second; S. E. Mulliken Takes Sweepstakes at Capital With Net 68; Other Tournaments Postponed

By Merrell W. Whittlesey

Yesterday's tournament golf program was curtailed, as expected, by the rain but Beaver Dam and Capital Club members went ahead with 18-hole handicap events.

Al Houghton attracted 32 entries in a match play against par tourney at Beaver Dam, with Jimmy Gipe the winner, finishing three down to perfect figures. Gipe shot a 76 and had one handicap stroke.

A. M. Woodside and Forest Thompson tied for second, the former finishing four down by shooting an 81 with a five-stroke allowance while Thompson was also four down with an 81, and used three strokes to advantage.

Tony Sylvester conducted a sweepstakes at Capital on a winner-take-all basis, and S. E. Mulliken finished with a net 68 for the only net prize. Mulliken scored 43-40, 83-15, 68. George Molloy again led the gross score with a fine 76.

Other handicap tournaments were postponed while the scheduled team match at Anacostia, between the Southeast public links players and East Potomac, was also deferred to the future book.

With the Beaver Dam course in good condition, despite the rain, and Peace Cross open to automobiles, Houghton expects a large field for the Middle Atlantic P. G. A. pro-amateur tournament today at the Landover course.

The professionals will be allowed three amateur partners ech, with the simon-pures all playing from scratch.

Preceding the golf the executive committee of the sectional pro association will take up Chandler Harper's eligibility for the Mid-Atlantic P. G. A. championship Friday and Saturday at Old Point Comfort, Va.

If Harper did not file his application for membership 30 days prior to the tournament date, he will be unable to play according to the P. G. A. by-laws.

CONGRESSIONAL

Ralph Bogart, the District amateur champion, and M. Parker Nolan were on the losing side of an all-star amateur match at Congressional, Charley Malone and Early McAleer turning the trick, 1 up.

Malone was best in the wind and rain, with an approximate 75, while Bogart was two strokes higher. Bogart and Lewis Worsham, Burning Tree pro, will play in the pro-am at Beaver Dam today, making the first appearance of the Mid-Atlantic pro-am team since they won the title last fall at Indian Spring.

ROCK CREEK

Harry Miller and George Sietz won the Rock Creek scotch foursome yesterday with a 36 as 18 teams competed. The favored duo of Cliff Spencer and Joe Micker, from East Potomac, lost out when they went 4 over par on two holes.

The boys played all day Saturday, Eddie Ault and Jack Sinclair winning the first nine-hole event, while other winners were Spencer and Bill Walsmith and Harry Miller and Tommy Doerer, jr.

Team Matches Postponed At Argyle, Chevy Chase

The women's team matches, scheduled at Argyle and Chevy Chase this morning, were postponed last night as the latter course is closed. The rule reads that all matches must be postponed if it is necessary to call off any one section. It is the third time the first series has been called in the past 10 days of rain. The second series has also been set back once, marking four postponements. No new date has been set, as the match will be worked in later in the season.

Mrs. H. W. Rowan will accept entries to the Mrs. Frank R. Keefer Cup tournament, scheduled Wednesday and Thursday at Chevy Chase, until 1 p. m. today.

Ace on 3d Round

William C. Sett, a sound technician employed by Charlie Chaplin, was playing his third game of golf on the Palo Verdes (Los Angeles) course when he came to the fourth hole, 210 yards in length. He took a hefty wallop with his brassie, one of three clubs in his bag, and the ball sailed into the cup for an ace.

Hoyas to Use Vinnie Powers Against Rams

Georgetown Nine Seeks Fourth Straight Win In Game Tomorrow

Vinnie Powers, Georgetown University's right-handed pitching ace, will go to the firing line tomorrow afternoon when the undefeated Hoyas entertain Fordham University's powerful Rams at Georgetown Medical diamond, 2:30 o'clock.

Fordham, an outstanding Georgetown nemesis since the undefeated season of 1936, is conceded a fine chance of snapping the Hoyas' unbeaten slate, and indications are that Powers will work the regulation nine innings in an effort to bring Georgetown home the winner.

Today marks the first of three games for the Hoyas this week. Georgetwon plays host to American University at the Medical diamond Wednesday and George Washington University on Friday at 2:30 o'clock.

Bill Wixted, John Dieckelman, Capt. John Smith and Jim Kiernan are pitchers who will be available for these games.

Charlotte Hall Nine to Play Blair Friday

Charlotte Hall, Md., April 21.—Charlotte Hall Military Academy's scheduled baseball game with St. Alban's School, of Washington, here yesterday, was postponed by Coach Shel Ehringer at noon on account of wet grounds.

The postponement marks the sixth time in nine scheduled contests that rain and wet grounds have prevented the Cadets from playing. Only three games have been played to date, resulting in one win and two losses for Charlotte Hall.

Continued postponements are placing an added burden upon the shoulders of Elliot (Lefty) Dent, Charlotte Hall's ace southpaw, who has been the only dependable Cadet flinger thus far. Dent elbowed his way to a 9-to-7 win over the strong Briarley Military Academy team on Thursday for his initial win of the year.

The Cadet hitters, impotent at the plate in the Gaithersburg and Hyattsville games, found the range in the Briarley battle, spraying 13 hits off their bats, to whip the favored Briarley team.

Only one game appears on the Cadet schedule for the coming week, that being listed with Montgomery-Blair High here on Friday afternoon. Ehringer announced today that a game with Mount St. Joseph's High School, of Baltimore, has been added to the schedule for May 29, thereby giving Charlotte Hall a 20-game schedule.

Interhigh Ball Series Resumes Today

Eastern Invades Anacostia; Western Plays Roosevelt

Only one game, instead of the five which were to have been played, are on the 1940 interhigh baseball records as teams launch a six-game schedule this week in the hope of a break from the weather.

Tech's unexpected triumph over Wilson, 2-0, largely due to the pitching of big Buddy Webb, is the only measure by which the eventual winner might be anticipated. As neither team did anything spectacular during last year's race, the probable victor is still without a game to its credit.

Hostilities will be launched today when Eastern, rained out Friday, moves out to Anacostia to meet a team which has yet to play a game. The other half of the washed-out Friday bill is rescheduled for tomorrow at Western stadium, where the home team and Roosevelt make their initial starts.

With the Western-Roosevelt game added, tomorrow's card lists a total of three games. Eastern plays its second game in two days, entertaining Tech's forces. And the defending champion, Central, is guest of once-beaten Wilson on the latter's field.

Friday's double bill gives Roosevelt its second victory chance and Wilson its third on the Presidents' lot. Tech completes the day's interhigh card, meeting Anacostia's Indians there. No less than 20 other games with local teams involved mark the week's activity.

Eastern Pro Grid Coaches Meet Here

Head coaches of the five Eastern teams in the National Professional Football League will hold a luncheon meeting here at Harvey's at 12:30 next Monday to decide on officials for the next season's games.

The coaches are Jock Sutherland, Brooklyn; Heinie Miller, Philadelphia; Steve Owen, New York; Walter Kiesling, Pittsburgh, and Ray Flaherty, Washington. Sutherland and Miller are newcomers.

Two objections will eliminate any official considered, and the final choices of the coaches must be approved by the executive committee of the league. Approval, however, is expected to be automatic.

A similar meeting of the Western coaches will be held in the near future in another city.

Wolverines Go Air-Minded: Plan Flight to Coast

Ann Arbor, Mich., April 21 (AP).—The University of Michigan football team will fly to the West Coast for its game September 28 with the University of California at Berkeley.

The flight will be the first ever to be undertaken by a Wolverine gridiron squad.

James Rae, of Toledo, Ohio, captain of last season's basketball team and a student member of the athletic board, was awarded the Western Conference medal for proficiency in athletics and scholarship.

Rae, a senior, also is a member of the track team.

Mann to Arrive Today For Bout With Everett

New Haven Heavyweight Will Workout at 3 At Huron Gym for 10-Round Engagement With D. C. Foe; Seeks 16th Straight Victory

Handsome Nathan Mann, one of the world's outstanding heavyweights currently pointing for a return championship boxing bout with Joe Louis, arrives in Washington at 12:50 o'clock today.

This afternoon at 3 o'clock the popular New Haven, Conn., contender goes through his final paces in a public workout at the Huron gymnasium, 511 Eleventh street northwest, prior to his scheduled ten-round feature with dangerous Buck Everett at Riverside Stadium tomorrow night.

One of the largest indoor crowds since boxing's legalization here is expected to be in attendance tomorrow night when Mann goes after his sixteenth consecutive victory since being knocked out by Joe Louis and Tony Galento.

Mann to Meet Baer

Mann, matched with Buddy Baer at Madiscon Square Garden May 3, cannot well afford to lose to Everett, a recognized spoiler among the big fellows, tomorrow night. Efforts on Promoter Mike Jacobs' part to have Mann released from the Everett bout after signing him for Buddy Baer failed when Matchmaker Jimmy Erwin refused to sanction the move.

In his latest outstanding bout Mann defeated Gunner Barlund knockout conqueror of Buddy Baer, before 15,000 fans, on a Finnish Relief Fund show. He also holds decisions over Artur Godoy and Bob Pastor, and defeated Steve Dudas in his only appearance here previously last summer, just prior to Dudas' stunning upset of Pat Comiskey, who previously had gone undefeated.

Everett, who lost on technical knockout to Bill Boyd, protege of Jack Dempsey, in his last appearance here, when a cut eye resulted in the halting of the bout after Everett had all but knocked out Boyd, has insured himself against a recurrence of that incident tomorrow night.

Import Handler

Not only will the competent Eddie Ross and enterprising Ed Derby work in Everett's corner, but Buck also is importing Matty Herbert, one of New York's three outstanding trainers, to handle any cuts that may develop.

Everett's reputation as a spoiler locally has no equal. He twice upset Natie Brown at a time Brown was ranked mong the world's ranking heavyweights and twice knocked out Murray Kanner when Kanner was considered an up-and-coming prospect among the heavies. He also has surprised Marty Gallagher, Al Delaney, Steve Dudas and Bob Tow locally and has never made a bad fight here.

In a scheduled eight-round semi-final Maynard Daniels, Marine Corps heavyweight champion, meets Gunbot Miller, Jimmy Johnston's six-foot, four-inch, 205-pound heavyweight. In a special eight-round event Sammy Magro, hard hitting Birmingham, Ala., welterweight, faces Gerard Delia, New York Italian knockout conqueror of Primo Flores.

A brace of four-round bouts opens the show.

Tickets are on sale at Riverside Stadium and reservations may be made through Republic 2950, between 9 a. m. and 5 p. m.

Erwin Signs Mayo For Bout, May 8

Gilbert Mayo, District golden gloves featherweight champion for the last three years, yesterday succumbed to the lure of professionalism and tentatively agreed to fight four bouts for Matchmaker Jimmy Erwin at Riverside Stadium.

Mayo's first start will be on the card of May 8 against an opponent yet to be named in a four-rounder.

Efforts Made To Match Padlo, Hurdman

Third Bout Between Close Rivals Sought For Turner's April 30

A second return match between Norman Hurdman and Mayon Padlo was being sought by Matchmaker Gabe Menendez last night to supplement the Phil Furr-Wild Bill McDowell return 12-rounder, which will feature the Turner's Arena fight card a week from tomorrow night.

Hurdman, a Canadian, upset Padlo in an exciting eight-rounder a few weeks ago and the latter's request for another meeting has enticed Menendez to obtain Hurdman.

Meanwhile, for the weekly wrestling card slated for Thursday, Promotor Joe Turner has arranged a special finish match between Otto Wallick, of Germany, and another of Jack Pfeffer's "freaks," Zim Zam Zum.

Headlining the evening will be the battle to the death of the Irish Angel and Dr. "Dropkick" Murphy.

In a preliminary, Count Carol Zbyszko, cousin of the famous wrestling brothers of the peculiar name, will clash with a gentleman called "Whiskers" Vanka Zlezniak. The battle of the "Zs" is expected to be one of the most attractive on the program.

American U. Meets Wilson Nine Today

American University athletes are preparing for their biggest sports week of the spring season with three baseball games, three tennis matches and a track meet scheduled within the next six days.

The card opened today with a baseball game with Wilson Teachers College on the A. U. field at 2:30. Ed Nicholson will pitch and Harry Newby will catch for the Eagles.

The nine returns to action Wednesday, traveling to Georgetown to meet its strongest foe of the year and concludes the week's activity with a game here against Western Maryland Saturday. Jim Whitlet probably will get the starting pitching assignment against Georgetown, with Carl Byham working the Western Maryland game.

The A. U. tennis team faces matches Tuesday, Wednesday and Saturday with Catawba, Randolph-Macon and Delaware, respectively, all at home. Meanwhile the track team is practicing for the Penn Relays Friday and Saturday at Philadelphia, where it will seek the Mason-Dixon Conference 1-mile relay championship.

Va. Gold Cup Course Made Ready for Race

Special Dispatch to The Post

Warrenton, Va., April 21.—Schooling over all the courses at Broadview, Warrenton, will be permitted the week of April 29, weather permitting, for the nineteenth annual Virginia Gold Cup Meet, Saturday, May 4, according to George W. Cutting, secretary of the race committee.

Rebrushing the jumps for the 1940 contest has been completed, and the course is in perfect condition owing to recent rains.

Every foot of the ground of the several courses at Broadview has been gone over by the large force of workmen. The first race will be called promptly at 3 p. m.

Twenty-one formidable barriers at Broadview have been minutely inspected by Mr. Cutting, who is out on the course shortly after "sun up" every morning, attending to the thousand and one details which must be done for a meet with the rank of the Virginia Gold Cup.

The four-race program will be inaugurated with "Boots and Saddles," after which entries for the Fauquier Plate will go to the post.

This race over hurdles is about one mile and a half, and has proven a fitting opening for the brilliant meet.

The Virginia Gold Cup, featured event, is a steeplechase, about four miles over the timber course.

The Virginia National, second only in importance to the Gold Cup, is also a steeplechase, about two miles and a half over the brush course.

The Warrenton Hunt Cup, over hurdles, about one mile and a half, is the final race of the afternoon.

The Gold Cup, valued at $1,500, which must be won three times by the same owner, has been returned by William F. Cochran, jr., Baltimore, winner in 1939, to be again contested this year. Mr. Cochran, with a second leg on the cup; Mrs Frank M. Gould, New York, with two legs on it, have again entered horses.

Van Horn Retains Net Championship

Beverly Hills, Calif., April 21 (AP).—Welby Van Horn, finalist last year in the national singles at Forest Hills, today successfully defended his Beverly Hills singles tennis title, defeating Jack Kramer, of Montebello, in the finals, 6-4, 6-3, 9-7.

Mary Arnold and Gertrude Dockstader, of Los Angeles, won the doubles, defeating the English pair, Valerl Scoot and Betty Nuthall, 3-6, 15-13, 6-3.

District Pair Lead National Doubles Event

Blakeney and Smith Total 838; Former 2d in All Events

By the Associated Press

New Haven, Conn., April 21.—Ed Blakeney and Hokie Smith, of Washington, D. C., went into the lead in the men's doubles championship of the National Duckpin Bowling Congress tournament here, while Blakeney took temporary hold on second place in the all-events.

Smith rolled 416 and Blakeney 422 as the District pair totaled 838 in the doubles. Blankeney added a 824 singles set and 410 team set for 1,256 in the all-events.

Other District scores in the singles included George Demeres, third, 439; William Megen, fourth, 434; and Louis Jenkins, fifth, 433.

Buck Harvey, of Baltimore, Md., jumped into the lead of the men's singles division with a record three-string total of 460.

The Baltimore bowler's score, comprising strings of 150, 148 and 162, was two pins better than the previous tournament record in the division, set at Washington in 1935 by Johnny Bianchi, of New Haven.

Nats Play Sox Today

but the Nats haven't started yet. Three consecutive defeats now find them 2½ games behind the league-leading Red Sox. Harris traces their failure to weak hitting, but is not unduly disturbed about that as yet.

The Nats' manager today received a letter from League President Will Harridge rebuking him for using profanity toward Umpire Joe Rue in the opening game with the Yankees, when Harris was ejected by the umpire. Harridge declared that in view of Harris' good record in the league, he was not imposing the usual three-day suspension penalty.

Herbert Guggenheim, Washington businessman, accompanied the Nats from New York to Boston by popular demand of the players . . . Guggenheim is hailed as a good luck charm, and the Nats need good luck no less than they need a few timely hits . . . Jake Early will break into the lineup as the Nats' catcher whenever the Red Sox show up with righthanded pitching . . . Lefty Grove, adhering to his once a week schedule, will return to the mound against the Nats on Tuesday . . . thus the Nats are getting no break in that direction, what with Grove facing them in his first two starts . . . Buddy Myer, now fully recovered from his illness, is ready for service against righthanded pitching and as a pinch hiteer . . .

Catholic Pin Tournament Opens Tonight

76 Teams Will Roll At Queen Pin Alleys; Event Ends May 4

The Washington Catholic Bowling League, the country's largest duckpin organization, composed of 76 teams, will open its seventh annual tournament at Queen Pin Alleys tonight and will continue through Saturday, May 4.

There will be team, doubles and singles events. All bowlers in the league are eligible to participate. Following the precedent established several years ago a handicap of 58 per cent, without limit, will be allowed.

In honor of its president, George F. Harbin, the league has named this event the "George F. Harbin Tournament." Harbin has headed the league since its organization in 1930.

The league will continue its practice of paying from its prize fund the entry fee for teams in the team event, and will also extend this practice this year to bowlers in the singles.

Charles Olive, proprietor of Queen Pin Alleys, will award trophies and medals to the winners of the team, doubles, singles and all events. These, coupled with the cash prizes offered by the league, make the tournament especially inducing to all the league bowlers, and a record entry is forecast.

This year's tournament will be handled by the same committee who officiated last year. William F. Curtin, official scorer is chairman, and Claude L. Nichols, vice president and official scorer, and Edward J. Keeley, league secretary, will assist.

15 Million Bowlers

The 1940 estimate of the number of bowlers in the United States is 15,000,000. Of that number, at least 4,500,000 are women. The figures are those of the American Bowling Congress, parent body of the sport.

FOR THE 1 MAN IN 7 WHO SHAVES EVERY DAY

A Special Shave Cream—It's Not a Soap, Needs No Brush!

Daily shaving leaves many men's faces raw and sensitive. Yet, because of his business and social status, one out of every 7 men must shave every day.

To meet this condition, Williams has now developed GLIDER—a special cream for daily shavers. With no soap base, it's a complete departure from ordinary shave creams. No brush. No lather. Not sticky or greasy.

A superabundance of moisture is contained in this rich cream. It won't dry on your face. Applied with the fingers, it quickly softens each whisker. A protective layer is formed over which your razor glides. Off comes each whisker. A protective layer is forming. Like a cold cream, yet not greasy, Glider helps keep your skin smooth all day. Glider is the result of 100 years experience in making fine shaving preparations.

FREE—tube of Glider. Send your name and address today. The J. B. Williams Co. Dept. QG-15, Glastonbury, Conn.

Aberdeen Stakes, Philadelphia 'Cap at Graw This Week

2-Year-Olds Perform on Wednesday

Older Horses Race Saturday; Mud and Rain Keeping Down Crowds and Betting

By Walter Haight

There is no truth in the rumor that Spang, the 2-year-old who was disqualified last week, had his number removed because he bumped into a lighthouse, but if the rain keeps up Havre de Grace may have to use little sailboats instead of horses. There is a report that Elmer Hathaway, the massive colored clocker who always carries a camp stool, has been bringing a net to the track in the mornings so he can dip shad at the quarter pole between workouts. Pinkerton detectives are investigating rumor that Pimlico has kidnaped the Sun and are saving him for Preakness day.

But all kidding aside, Kid Rain and his twin brothers, Light Shower and Drizzle, have played havoc with the sport of kings up there on the high (thank goodness) south bank of the Susquehanna River. True, the horses have been running, people have been coming and betting has been indulged in, but there has been curtailment in each case due to the continual downpours.

Hurt Chesapeake

While I don't believe it would have changed the result, last Saturday's $15,000 Chesapeake would have been a much better race, both from horse and spectator angles, had it been conducted under smiling skies and over a fast track.

But the show goes on. Last week, handicap sprinters of the seasoned variety had their innings in the Harford and the 3-year-olds had their big day in the Chesapeake. This week, chief attention will be given over to the 190 juveniles and routers among the older handicap steeds.

On Wednesday, the 2-year-olds, oodles of them if the track dries out, are scheduled to battle in the $2,500 added Aberdeen. On Saturday, the handicap performers will do their stuff in the $10,000 added Philadelphia Handicap.

It is the twenty-eighth running of the Aberdeen coming up and it is likely to draw a dozen or more youngsters who have won this year, perhaps a few more who have been close, and maybe one or two who will be making the first start of their careers.

The Aberdeen has been won by many horses who went on to greatness. The group includes George Smith and Paul Jones, winners of Kentucky Derbies; Careful, Single Foot, Tippity Witchet, Rockman, Bonanza and Vander Pool.

Line-up Uncertain

Even with the race three days away, this is no time to be trying to pick the winner or, for that matter, attempting to lineup the field. Some of the juveniles, variously mentioned as prospective starters are Cook Book, Classic Beauty, Becomly, Madigama, Nannykins, Your Bid, Zacorel, Blue Twink, Marion Collins, Yankee Party, Double Call, Socratic, White Time, Road Scraper, Zacharias, Tripit and Ring Star.

As in the case of the Aberdeen, the line-up for the Philadelphia Handicap depends, in a large measure, on the condition of the track. At least four horses now in New York will be shipped down if the oval is fast. They are Fighting Fox, The Chief, Third Degree and Day Off. However, there will be enough horses already in this section to make it interesting regardless of conditions.

RACING NOTES

Here's good news . . . Jockey Nick Wall will be back in the saddle real soon . . . in fact, Frank Hawley, jockey room physical director, says Wall will ride in the Aberdeen on Wednesday . . . Frank stopped by Wall's hotel room in Baltimore and worked on the jockey's muscles and reports he is not as badly injured as was at first supposed . . . betting at the Graw is away off, mostly due to the rain . . . Friday's handle was a mere $186,933 . . . the plant can't make it on that . . . This jockey, Georgie Woolf, is a remarkable fellow . . . he rides few races and often takes long layoffs . . . but when he is called and the chips are down, he is right there, close to the weight and with all his skill . . . he certainly helped Pictor win that Chesapeake . . . "Dynamite" Kerr is still plenty proud of that Dr. Cyclops Trophy that his Dizzy Dame won in the snow and rain at Bowie . . . Ralph Neves is leading the riders here . . . although he was born in Boston, he calls San Francisco his home town . . . it doesn't matter where he's from, it's where he's going that counts . . . especially when we bet on him . . . and just to keep the record right, Pictor is NOT a half-brother of Challedon.

Know Your Dogs—

No. 40 of a Series

By George Berner

ENGLISH SETTER

Originated, as the name implies, in England about 1500 A. D. Was used to find game birds and "set" so that the hunters net could be thrown over him as well as the birds. Used now for the same purpose, to locate birds and hold them until the hunter flushes. Probably one of the most beautiful dogs to be shown at the show in Alexandria April 27

Gallahadion Works Out At Churchill

Steps Mile and Eighth In 2:02 3-5 in Longest Derby Workout

Louisville, Ky., April 21.—Mrs. Ethel V. Mars' Gallahadion, a Kentucky Derby eligible, stepped a mile and one-eighth in 2:02 3-5 at Churchill Downs today. The workout was the longest for a Derby candidate on a public Kentucky track this season.

To railbirds, the prep indicated the son of Sir Gallahad III—Countess Time was being groomed as the standout of Mrs. Mars' five Derby nominees. Others are Chatted, Tough Hombre, Gold Teddy and Valtite.

Fractionals for the four quarters of the first mile were 0:25 2-5, 0:52, 1:20 and 1:48.

District's O'Brien To Play at Newman

Lakewood, N. J.—Miles O'Brien, son of Mr. and Mrs. Henry C. O'Brien, of 1200 Sixteenth street, Washington, D. C., looms as a likely candidate for rightfield on the Newman School baseball team.

Edward W. Mahan, former Harvard all-American football star and ace hurler, is director of athletics here.

The complete 1940 schedule:
April 17, Peddie; 20, Brooklyn Academy; 27, Lawrenceville, away; May 1, Admiral Farragut; 4, Pingry, away; 11, Morristown School; 18, Admiral Farragut, away; 18, Stevens; 25, St. Benedict's, away; June 1, Rutgers Prep.

Isolater and Jim Fitzsimmons, 'Couple of Irishmen,' in Racing

Horse and Trainer Both First Saw Light In Erin; Dixie Handicap Now Their Goal

The story of Isolater, 7-year-old thoroughbred owned by William Woodward and trained by the masterful James Fitzsimmons, may well be the tale of a couple of Irishmen waiting for the traditional luck of their race.

No lineal tracings are necessary to prove the proud racial heritage of Mr. Fitzsimmons; even if you had never met or seen him his name would tell you he is Irish. On the other hand there is nothing about Isolater to indicate he was born in Ireland, even his name belies his nationality for the sons of the Emerald Isle are notable for sociability, fistic or otherwise.

Isolater was born in Ireland in 1933. It was planned for him to carry the colors of William Woodward in the great races of England but the tax laws of that empire persuaded the sportsman to bring his horse to America. He arrived here and Trainer Fitzsimmons was so impressed by the animal he decided that Isolater was cut out to be a good race horse; the kind of horse to run over a distance in races where stamina was just as important as speed.

Won One Race

Accordingly Isolater was not seen under colors until the 1936 renewal of the Belmont Stakes. He didn't win, his stablemate Granville did, but it was excellent education. In fact that first year Isolater won only one race in seven starts. Not an impressive showing and his following year was less impressive; four starts and no victories.

In 1938 the patience and confidence of Sunny Jim Fitzsimmons were rewarded. Isolater won six races and over $17,000. Last year the accomplishments of Isolater were more gratifying to owner and trainer when the final tabulation credited him with two highly important stake victories. In 1939 he won the Saratoga Cup at 2 miles and the Gallant Fox Handicap at 1⅛ miles, races proving the qualities which Sunny Jim first saw when Isolater landed in these shores five years before.

Although Isolater had arrived, in the opinion of Mr. Fitzsimmons, the day he landed in America, it was not until the autumn of 1939 that he arrived for the racing public. Last October Owner Woodward was handed an invitation for Isolater to meet the finest in the country in the Pimlico Special.

Forced to Idle

Downright hard luck, a minor injury blamable to Isolater himself, forced his retirement from training for the season. He missed the Special, the race which may have been his greatest and his adieu to the public.

The Dixie Handicap at Pimlico on May 8 is Isolater's goal. The Dixie is the first great handicap of the season, and Sunny Jim believes the two Irishmen have suffered enough misfortune in their careers.

"It's time," says the dean of American trainers, "for the luck of the Irish to start working. I still don't think I have seen Isolater run his greatest race and as long as he is sound I am going to run him until he shows it to me. It may well be in the Dixie at Pimlico next month."

Selections at Havre de Grace

Dear Al:

Some racing reforms to which this column has given support have come to pass for which we are thankful. But, although Alfred Gwynne Vanderbilt and others in the turf sportlight have admitted something should be done about trainers conditioning horses in races, there has been no move in that direction. There is one angle along that line that encourages horsemen to get their charges beaten and that is the rule which forces penalties on horses which win races after the weights are announced. For instance, a trainer has a horse in a certain stake with, say, 109 pounds. He knows that he must pick up 3 pounds if he wins in a tune-up race three days before the stake. The $800 or so that he would get for winning the overnight race means little to him. His objective is that $5,000 or $10,000 event on Saturday. He wants his horse "to have a race" in preparation for the stake, and, were it not for picking up penalty weight, he would be right in there knocking and willing to win. It is only natural that he wants to get in the big money race as light as he can. Well, it doesn't always happen, but, more times than enough, he sends the horse out to run, but not to be abused. This is the same as pulling a horse in my book. I would like to have the weights for all stakes announced before the start of the meeting with no penalties for winning before the stake or handicap. And, speaking of weights in stakes, I still maintain that the assignment should not be left to a racing secretary. Rather, I would like to see a "weight board," or a similar group, to which a horseman might take an appeal if he believes his horse is overweighted. I believe that the relatively poor man with "one good horse" should get the same shake as the millionaire owner with a barn of 50 horses. I'm not trying to say that racing secretaries are not trying to do their best. What I want to bring out is that there should not be any dictatorship connected with the weights. Then there is always the chance of partiality creeping into it. You know, "if you ship your horses here, etc." Perhaps this all makes dull reading, but, if it reaches the eyes of any of the Mr. Bigs, whether he likes it or not, it will have served its purpose. Let's give Confucius a $20 bank roll and see what he can do with it. For today, Confucius say: Actress is rarin' to go, for two bucks of that dough. BILL.

First race—Haste Back was second in his recent race at Bowie and displayed promising form in other trials at that point. He appears well placed in this event. Sky Lane is a first time starter from the Christiana Stable that brought $3,500 as a yearling last summer. Bettie Nux just missed in her last and rates a good chance.

Second race—Bud's Light won his seasonal bow in convincing style over this track and, meeting a similar field of platers today, he figures to repeat. Little Mowlee was a disappointment in his last and is capable of better effort. Ravenhurst is a half-miler with a lot of early speed. May last for the show.

Third race—Sunphantom closed with a rush to finish a length behind Dizzy Dame in his last start. He meets cheaper competition today and receives the call. Argella needed that last race and will be the one to beat if able to flash some of the good form displayed last summer. Surprise Box is in form and will be a factor.

Fourth race—Ringie won his last and has been consistently close while running with the best 3-year-old sprinters in the park. He stands out in this group. Port Wales has early foot and should last to earn the place award. Hard Way, coupled with the top one, has raced well with better grade platers.

Fifth race—Playmore needs several races before finding his best form. The contention here is the usual cheap sort and the veteran plater should find the track to his liking. Petit Jean makes her first start this season but is in smart hands and might be the one to beat. Bullet B. is capable of doing better than shown.

Sixth race—Scarlet O. failed to match strides with Fair Elise last week but appears capable of handling this ordinary field of cheaper grade platers. Scout About needed her last race and is due to show improved effort. Mary May is consistently close in this company and has a good money chance.

Seventh race—Brilliant One dropped a nose decision to Schley Goree over an off track last start in creditable time. Portunus closed fast last out and may be a contender in the late stages. Rowes Crump won his last but didn't beat much.

Best bet—Ringie.

Jockey Gets Free Mud Facial

After riding in Saturday's first race at Havre de Grace, Jockey Lindberg, face covered with mud from a track which had absorbed rain for several days, still finds time to smile when weighing out after race

Andy K Now Doubtful Kentucky Derby Entry

'Running Out' Habit Unchecked as Proved Saturday at 'Graw; Bimelech Installed 8-5 Future Book Favorite; Pictor Well Liked

By the Associated Press

New York, April 21.—Old man weather took a good look at the Kentucky Derby picture as painted by a rainbow mixture of future book odds and 2-year-old form of 1939, and didn't like it a little bit.

"Here's mud in your eye," he sang in Maryland, at Jamaica and Keeneland—and the mess he left made it look today like a different production altogether.

Off his latest gag at fixing things up just dandy in yesterday's 3-year-old racing, you have these immediate results:

1—Andy K. hasn't a chance in the run for the roses or any other race unless there's a horse running on his outside to keep him from galloping all over the track. Yes, sir, he still runs out.

2—Big Boy Bimelech is still the horse to beat, and the future book odds-makers are so convinced of that they dropped his odds from 2 to 1 to 8 to 5 today.

3—Pictor, Maryland-bred son of the same sire who produced "Boss Man" Challedon, is going to take a lot of beating on any man's racing strip, particularly if it comes up mud, as he proved yesterday in "swimming" home by two lengths in the Chesapeake Stakes' mile-and-sixteenth.

4—Roman, a "second-stringer" on Joseph E. Widener's turf "team" at this time a year ago, has made the "varsity"—but definitely—and might do a Frank Merriwell for the boys and girls, come Derby Day. He turned in a honey at 6 furlongs at Keeneland yesterday.

5—Flight Command has succeeded Carrier Pigeon as Sony Whitney's No. 1 hope, and many who know more than one-and-one about the gee-gees were whispering today that he was just fooling the folks in his second place finish to stablemate Parasang yesterday at Jamaica.

6—Fenelon, hope of William Woodward and Sunny Jim Fitzsimmons to follow Johnstown into the winner's circle at the Downs, is going to take a lot of improving between now and May 4.

Two races this week—the Blue Grass Stakes mile-and-an-eighth at Keeneland and the Wood Memorial at Jamaica next Saturday—should go a long way toward straightening out the mess. At any rate, the word is Bimelech will have his first test in the Blue Grass, which will definitely prove the yes-and-no so far as the form of Col. E. R. Bradley's Big Fellow is concerned.

Meantime, the future books aren't waiting for things to get too hot. They checked up today and, in addition to dropping Bimelech, they also nose-dived Pictor, who now has two-for-two to his credit in his 3-year-old racing, from 40 to 1 'way down to 12. The books climbed all over themselves slicing his price after the way he led Harold A. Clark's Royal Man, Andy K. and Fenelon home in the goo at Havre de Grace.

Amblin' Andy, previously coupled with Charles S. Howard's Mioland as second choice to Bimmie, jumped to 8 to 1 from 5. Mioland slipped off to 4.

Parasang, a non-Derby eligible, made every pole a winning one in the inaugural Experimental Handicap six furlongs, but Flight Command held second place, and then went on to wind up the mile in just under 1:45.

Most interesting development came when Andy K., supposedly cured of the "running-out" habit which cost him so much last year, had it just as bad as ever. Trying to get around Pictor at the first run at Havre, he veered, and coming down the stretch he bore out repeatedly. From this performance, you drew the conclusion that Tony Pelletrini, who knows as many of the answers as the next fellow, may not even ship his galloper to Louisville unless he can be guaranteed an inside post position so that there will be another stepper alongside Amblin' Andy. And, when last heard from, the Downs weren't guaranteeing that.

California Woman Granted Boxing Referee's License

Los Angeles, April 21 (AP).—Even the third man in the ring is giving away to the gentler sex.

A license to referee amateur boxing bouts has been granted to Mrs. Belle Martell, of Los Angeles, by the California Athletic Commission.

The 45-year-old woman, claiming to be the only licensed timekeeper and announcer in the fight business, passed the State examination with the highest score of any of the applicants—97½.

Mrs. Martell said she planned to wear regulation grey flannels in the ring—

Sciranka Rolls 699 in A. B. C.

Detroit, April 21 (AP).—The American Bowling Congress was shy of sensations today, largely because even a resounding 699 isn't good enough to make the first ten in the singles any more.

George Sciranka, of Pittsburgh, rolling in his first A. B. C. reached that figure with a 240-224-235 series, but it takes 704 or better to get into the elite group.

Nick Cornish, whose 724 carried the Rosedale Club of Kansas City into first place in the team event with 3,003 last night, rolled 537-604 in doubles and singles today for an 1,865 all-events, far out of the first ten.

Mike Shirghio, of Mount Vernon, N. Y., second in the 1932 singles and former international champion, rolled a 681 singles for 1925 and eighth in the all-events.

Reds-Card Game Time Advanced Because of Flood

Cincinnati, April 21 (U.P.).—Warren Giles, general manager of the Cincinnati Baseball Club, said tonight that tomorrow's game at Crosley Field between the St. Louis Cardinals and the Reds would be advanced one hour to beat the creeping flood waters of the Ohio River.

He said that flood waters enter the field at 58.7 feet. The river was reported at 6 p. m. tonight at 54.8 feet and rising .1 foot every two hours. He said that the games on Tuesday and Wednesday would be postponed since the Ohio was expected to reach a crest of 59 feet by Wednesday.

Fair Deal For Rails

By Roger W. Babson

Reorganization Speed Urged

ONLY REORGANIZATION of the railroads' capital set-up and policies can prevent the air lines, buses and trucks from eventually making nearly one-half the railroad mileage useless. For that reason, I believe the Wheeler-Lea Bill, or some similar friendly legislation, should be pushed through this session of Congress. The railroads should be unshackled to give them an even break in their life and death battle with other carriers.

The railroads are the Nation's second biggest taxpayers, biggest customers and biggest investment. If the railroads could get back on their feet, they could provide thousands of new jobs, put millions of dollars in investors' pockets and give business a tremendous hypodermic. Today, hampered by ICC regulations, top-heavy capitalization, short-sighted labor leaders and antiquated rate schedules, the railroads are being battered into a pulp by their aggressive competitors. Pullman traffic is going to the air lines; coach traffic to the buses; lucrative freight and express business to the trucks.

I HAVE NO particular love for the railroads, but I hate to see a $20,000,000,000 industry die; I hate to see a million-dollar-a-day taxpayer sandbagged; I hate to see an employer of a million men hog-tied. But that is exactly what is happening every minute. In the last two years the airlines more than doubled their passenger load.

Their rates are dropping steadily—now are on even terms with Pullman rates on many a jump. Like the railroads, they are soon to segregate their mail, express and passenger business. A year or two more and we will see freight trains of the air! This is the subrosa idea for using the thousands of military airplanes which, after the European war, will be available for commercial purposes.

THE PLANES are great time-savers. Their safety record gets better every year—actually beat the railroads in 1939. They are clean and comfortable; give wonderful service; every passenger is a king. The railroads have improved in this respect, but are still far behind the air lines. They need new blood, younger personnel, men trained in public relations. Instead of disagreeable ticket agents, cold and impersonal train crews, they need employes who like making passengers and shippers comfortable and happy. The colored porters come closer to filling the bill than the high-paid conductors!

The roads must put on more streamlined equipment—not on a few runs—but on many runs. Pullman rates must be slashed drastically, perhaps eventually eliminated. Running time must be continually speeded up. Duplicate runs must be stopped—trains pooled, branch lines eliminated. Freight rates must be flexible—quick to drop when competition threatens. Differentials in the South must be wiped out. Trucks cannot possibly haul heavy freight as c

with Slocum

Archibald Leffingwell McDonald slid a ray of sunshine into a rainy afternoon Friday when he broadcast the first reconstructed wire report of a baseball game we had watched him do.

The Yankees were having little or no trouble with the Senators and as the pitch by pitch story of the game trickled in via Glenn Wally's telegraph bug Arch was something to watch. He sits next to the microphone, watching Wally's typewriter as the agile telegrapher translated dots and dashes into English.

McDonald must necessarily keep a few pitches behind the play in New York, although he keeps closer to teh actual game than any broadcaster in the business. Most of the boys stay a full inning behind their telegrapher, but Arch is having a bad afternoon when he's more than one batter in arrears.

But that's not the story I started to tell. You may remember the Nats kicked in four runs for the Yankees last Friday. While reports of this carnage came over the telegraph instrument Arch looked like a gentleman having a cantankerous molar extracted by a plumber. His head bobbed, pain filled his baby-blue eyes, he threw his arms to high heavens and probably suffered even more than Bucky Harris.

Wally, Arch's telegrapher, is just as bad. You don't have to understand Morse to realize the Nats are in trouble. Just watch Wally's face as he listens to the instrument. A look of blank terror spreads across his otherwise pleasant kisser when Joe Gordon hit that homer with one aboard. He drew Arch's attention to the bad news and the rather hefty Leffingwell slumped dejectedly in his chair before resuming the broadcast.

One of these days I'm going to watch the boys with my ears stuffed and I'll guarantee to tell the score within two runs either way after five innings, and that is not to be construed as a crack at the Nats.

These Women!

LEAP YEAR LADY by ALMA SIOUX SCARBERRY

After securing from Tex a promise to marry her the following day, Smoky goes home to be alone with her thoughts and review the past that has brought about this drama in her life. She is going to marry Tex, but she longs to be in the arms of Karl, her former sweetheart, who had married Dagne Olsen. Next day she gets ready for the marriage, meets Tex and the ceremony is performed in the municipal building. Then Tex tells her he knows why she married him, but that he really loves her.

Chapter 14

In a few minutes they were out on the street and Tex was helping her into a taxi.

"Mrs. Stacy," he said huskily. "Where would you like to dine?"

"Are we really married?" Smoky said dazedly when she found herself sitting at a corner table of an expensive cocktail lounge down the street from the theater a few moments later.

Tex's deep gray eyes were almost black in the intensity of their passion as he gripped her hands under the table.

"We are, God help us," he said tensely.

Smoky looked up at him questioningly, and her eyes dropped before his steady gaze.

"I don't know what this is all about, Smoky," he told her quietly. "But I married you because I loved you, and because I couldn't keep from marrying you. I've fought against it from the day I first saw you sitting in Melvin's office."

She swallowed, too startled to answer. Tex bent and kissed her swiftly on the lips.

"Don't be afraid, little Smoky. I won't hurt you. I know you don't love me. But, so help me, I'll kill the first man that tries to take you away from me."

Tex wasn't Tex. Not the smiling, gentle, good-natured cowboy Smoky had married so that she could lead him around by the nose and make use of him to her own best advantage.

The shedding of his cowboy raiment made him look like a stranger. Gone was his Texas drawl and his country-boy manner.

Smoky, looking at him across the table of the restaurant, knew suddenly, intuitively, that Tex Stacy was not at all what he pretended to be. This was the atmosphere in which he belonged. Smart cocktail lounges, dining with lovely ladies—not on a horse riding a trail, or eating bacon and beans in a chuck cabin.

"I—what makes you think there would be another man," she stammered finally when she could catch her breath. "Th-that's a nice thing to say to your wife when you're just beginning your honeymoon."

Getting Things Straight

She smiled a little scared smile. It was the key to the real Smoky that he adored and Tex smiled back whitely:

"I'm sorry if I sound like a Bluebeard. I'm not, really. But surely you don't think I'm in the habit of letting beautiful ladies wind me around their fingers as you've done, darling. You made up your mind to land me the first evening I was out at your house and you've been working overtime at it ever since."

"Oh!" Smoky gasped, and her face colored crimson.

She was too flabbergasted to deny it and Tex sighed.

"If you hadn't asked me to marry you last night, I suppose I'd have proposed to you. I've been trying not to for two weeks. That's why I had never kissed you, or touched you. I knew if I did I was finished."

Smoky toyed with her first champagne and her heart beat so fast she could scarcely breathe. If she hadn't been sitting in a restaurant she was certain she would have had to scream.

"I—I suppose you think I'm not good enough for you," Shamrock found her voice to say finally.

"Good is hardly the word for it," Tex released her hand to light a cigarette. "If you mean that I may be harboring the idea that you're a woman of the world, don't let that worry you. It's just that I'm afraid you've got the idea into that little red head of yours that you're going to be. And that I'm victim number one in your parade."

It was true that Smoky lost her fear and found herself getting angry. Perhaps Tex had married her to make a fool of her. She wanted to kill him because he saw through her so clearly.

Smoky Gets a Lesson

"I—I'd like to slap your conceited face," she wailed childishly, and Tex shook his head and smiled crookedly. "Not here, Mrs. Stacy! A woman should never strike her husband in a public place. Shall we dance?"

Holding her closely as the orchestra played softly, Tex said thickly: "If you stay in my arms, Smoky, I'll remember to scold you."

"I'll remember that," she breathed softly, pressing close to him. "I'll make you glad you married me, Tex. I promise."

Back at the theater Smoky's hands shook until she couldn't head her eyelashes. Torchy put down her own jar of cold cream and asked suspiciously: Say, what's wrong? You're a nervous wreck. Here, let me do that for you."

Smoky held her shaking knees: "I—I think I'm catching cold. Chills."

"You better take a good hot shot of liquor and go to bed when you get home." Torchy picked up Smoky's match stick and began to help her make up her eyes. "I guess you're not used to running around drafty theaters in a G string."

"I guess that's what's the matter," Shamrock chattered. "But I'll be all right tomorrow."

"Your cowhand certainly got a break from the papers," Torchy said. "And so did we. Now's the time to cash in. When you're in a spot like this. If I don't make a killing this season my name ain't Clemantine Goldenberg. The first guy that takes me out gets hit for a fur coat. Mine looks like an underprivileged prairie dog."

Shamrock scarcely heard the babbling of Torchy or the other girls in the dressing room. She moved through the second performance of "Snapshots" in a daze. Just before the closing of the first act the doorman delivered another small box. In it was an orchid exactly matching the one of the evening before.

Smoky's first thought was that Tex would probably be jealous if he found out about it. Especially if she wore it. Torchy was flabbergasted when she pushed the box aside indifferently and offered: "You wear it, Torchy. I don't want it."

Torchy felt her head. "Are you sure you don't need a doctor, Smoke? Or are you just going nuts."

Clancy Is Told

Smoky had called Clancy and broken the news of her marriage to him before she and Tex went to the theater. There had been a short silence at the other end of the wire and then Clancy had recovered his voice and given his blessing.

Shamrock hoped devoutly that her father would be in bed when she brought her new husband home to Astoria. Clancy, wanting time to get his own bearings, was sitting in his room with the light out when they arrived.

He heard the key turn in the lock, and then a little later two pairs of feet tiptoeing up the stairs. Smoky's marriage was the greatest blow Clancy O'Toole had ever had in his life, and his weak heart fluttered coldly in his giant chest.

It was the damn O'Toole pride that had done it. The O'Tooles always did have to show 'em. And they would stop at nothing short of murder to do it. Clancy didn't believe it possible Smoky could have married Tex Stacy because she loved him. Because if she had she would have come to her father and asked for his blessing.

Clancy's Plans

She had sneaked off down to the municipal building and gone through a quick ceremony like a heathen because she knew he would see through her reason. She had been afraid he would try to stop her from ruining her life.

Clancy hoped that by morning he would have recovered his bearings sufficiently to put on a good show. There was no need adding to Shamrock's heartache by letting her see the blow had been almost a mortal one to him.

If Smoky had really made up her mind to marry for anything but love, Clancy was sorry Tex Stacy had to be the victim. He had grown very fond of Tex, and it wasn't right for Smoky to take a clean-cut, square-shooting boy from the Western plains and make a doormat out of him.

But, Clancy reasoned, offering excuses for his changed daughter, how could you expect a 19-year-old girl to react any differently to the blow of having Karl marry Dagne Olsen and bring her next door to live? Maybe if Shamrock's mother had lived she would have known how to have helped her through without a tragedy. A man couldn't raise a little girl right by himself, no matter how hard he tried.

Upstairs in the little room Tex opened his traveling bag and took out his pajamas and robe, toothbrush and toothpaste. Smoky sat on the bed watching him, and it all seemed like a dream.

Well, she'd show him! She'd chain him to her and hold him just as long as she needed him. It was easy if you didn't let your own emotions become involved.

And there wasn't a man alive who could ever get close enough to stick a knife in her heart again. Of that Shamrock was very sure!

School Aliens In Citizenship, Council Told

Daughters of 1812 Hear Mrs. Robert; Memorial Rite Held

Educate immigrants and "get them on the right road to good American citizenship," Mrs. Henry M. Robert, jr., president general of the D. A. R., urged more than 100 at a dinner meeting of the forty-eighth associate council of the National Society, U. S. Daughters of 1812, at the Willard Hotel last night.

She emphasized "living by today's codes and not by the codes of our ancestors," adding: "We must be essentially practical and not have antiquated ideals to try to live up to."

The best means of achieving such a goal is to "contact individuals, and after obtaining their good will move on to community activities," she said.

Mrs. H. D. Diefenbach, president of the Association of State Presidents and charter members, presided.

Earlier yesterday memorial services were held at Epiphany Church for 114 members of the organization who have died in the past year. Mrs. Henry O. Bruns, of New Orleans, national chaplain, was in charge of the service. A star of lilies and carnations in memory of the deceased was laid on the grave of Mrs. Mary Logan Tucker, a former national director, at Soldiers' Home Cemetery.

At today's session at 8 p. m., at the Willard, Rear Admiral P. S. Rossiter, surgeon general of the Navy, retired, will discuss "What the United States May Learn From 1912." Col. Frederick Gilbert Bauer, president of the General Society, War of 1812, also will speak. The United States Marine Band Orchestra will play.

Tomorrow at 9 a. m. reports of national officers and charter trustees will be given. The sessions will close Wednesday afternoon.

Green Calls C. I. O. 'Enemy of Labor'

Dallas, Tex., April 21 (AP).—President Willam Green of the American Federation of Labor today termed leaders of the Congress of Industrial Organizations the "greatest enemies of labor this century has produced."

Green charged in an address before a Southwest labor conference that the original split with those who formed the C. I. O. came because the A. F. L. voted against an issue they favored.

"A man who can't abide by the will of the majority is a coward," Green said.

Cleric Follows Atavistic Call to the Sea

That old devil sea, which lured his hardy ancestors to watery graves, has called a local clergyman.

THE REV. ROY LeMOINE

He is the Rev. Roy E. Le Moine, youthful rector of Esther Memorial Episcopal Church in Congress Heights, whose appointment as acting naval chaplain has been approved by the Navy Department. It will carry a rank of lieutenant, junior grade.

The cleric, who will begin training on May 1, probably at the Navy Yard, admitted yesterday that the sea always had been in his blood, describing how two of his forebears, sailors in the British Merchant Marine, died on duty.

Even his father, the Rev. Emmanuel A. Le Moine, British-born rector of St. Columba's Episcopal Church at Forty-second and Albermarle streets northwest here, went to sea as a cabin boy at 12, he explained. His paternal grandfather, sailor in the French navy, migrated to Newfoundland in 1870.

In 1935-36 he took a year's leave from his studies at Seabury Western Theological Seminary, Evanston, Ill., to work among CCC lads in Kentucky, having a rank of ensign in the United States Naval Reserve at that time.

He is a graduate of Northwestern University and Seabury, and assumed his local post in June, 1938. He and Mrs. Le Moine reside at the Congress Apartments, 3325 Nichols avenue southeast.

The Rev. Mr. Le Moine will preach his final sermon to his Congress Heights parish on Sunday, May 28. He is also chaplain at St. Elizabeths Hospital.

Seder Rites At Sundown Open Passover

Reading of Hagada, Eating of Matzoh Will Feature Services

Traditional Seder rites today at sundown in local Jewish homes will usher in the observance of Passover, commemorating the exodus of Jews from Egypt and their freedom from bondage.

Reading of the Hagada and the eating of unleavened bread—matzoh—and bitter herbs will feature the family services, symbolizing the hardships of bondage, appreciation at having been freed and obligations of freedom.

The feast, lasting eight days, will be celebrated on Tuesday morning at the Washington Hebrew Temple and in the Orthodox synagogues then and Wednesday mornings. Young men's and women's Hebrew associations throughout the United States will have public Seder rites tonight and Tuesday nights.

Transients and wayfarers without family connections have been invited to celebrate Passover with the Hebrew Sheltering Society, 407 Massachusetts avenue northwest, tonight and Tuesday. A. L. Schiller, president, has announced the society's need of garments for distribution among the needy.

Enlisted Jewish men in the Army and Navy, the United States Coast Guard and the CCC will be granted furloughs for the holiday. The United States Veterans' Administration also is to grant leave to disabled veterans whose condition permits. Unleavened bread and prayerbooks will be distributed by the Jewish Welfare Board to enlisted men of Jewish faith.

Col. H. C. Coe, Gynecologist, Is Dead at 84

He Helped Organize Medical Reserve Corps for Army

Col. Henry Clarke Coe, 84, gynecologist and one of the organizers of the Medical Reserve Corps of the Army, died yesterday at his home, 1300 Clifton terrace northwest.

COL. COE

Funeral services will be conducted at 2 p. m. tomorrow at the Church of the Epiphany by the Rev. ZeBarney Phillips. Burial will be in Arlington Cemetery at 3 p. m.

Col. Coe, born in Cincinnati, was educated at a local preparatory school. He was graduated from Yale in 1878. In 1881 he received his M. D. degree from Harvard Medical School. He obtained another M. D. degree from the College of Physicians and Surgeons, Columbia University, the following year.

In 1914 he became interested in Gen. Leonard Wood's plan of Reserve Officers Training Camps, and undertook to organize physicians for military service. During the World War he served in England and France with the American Expeditionary Force as commander of mobile hospital units.

He lived in Washington since 1930. His wife died here in 1936. He published many medical papers, and belonged to nearly a score of medical societies in this country and abroad. He was a former governor of the American College of Surgeons and a past president general of the American Gynecological Society.

Col. Coe was a member of Phi Beta Kappa, Delta Kappa Epsilon, the Yale Club, the Ohio Society, the Army and Navy Club of New York and Washington, and the Fencers of New York.

Surviving are two sons, Arthur Paul Coe, of Washington, and Fordyce Barker Coe, of Greenwich, Conn., and three grandchildren.

2 More Groups 'Shoulder Arms' For Blitzkrieg on D. C. Rats

Capital 'Pied Pipers' Prepare Lethal Tidbits in Drive to Cut Down City's Population of Thousands of Rodents

In three parts of the city yesterday plans were being laid for an offensive against the rodents, suggested by a campaign being conducted by young people's groups of the Chevy Chase Presbyterian Church in cooperation with Temple Center, Tenth and M streets northwest.

As M-day for the city-wide putsch against rats approached, the following preparations were taking place.

Young people from the Chevy Chase church and Temple Center, aided by a delegation from Metropolitan Baptist Church, had mixed and distributed 1,600 poison-loaded pellets which yesterday were being placed in spots frequented by rats.

A speakers' bureau of 12 young persons from the Chevy Chase church, under direction of Mrs. Arthur W. Dudley, 1608 Upshur street northwest, have completed three talks to local groups interested in rat-killing and plan five more.

Stamping out this city's rats is no small job, according to Dr. Frank N. Jarvis, who gave technical advice to the poison pellet-makers at Temple Center Saturday.

Dr. Jarvis takes no stock in estimates that there is one rat to every two humans in Washington, but he does believe the rat population numbers in the hundreds of thousands.
